The Common People.
Much Talk, Little Help.
First Car of Oranges.
Intelligent Jacksonville.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 8.

THE HON. Dave Sholtz, nominated for Governor by Florida Democrats, which means that he will be elected, promises to aid "the common people," and offers a definite plan, as follows:

"We must cut out this monkey business and foolish expenditures and get down to earth."

He should telegraph that program to Washington.

MR. SHOLTZ could help the common people that everybody talks so much about by persuading Florida to free from all taxes and assessments any house, land and furniture used by the owner and his family only, worth not more than $3,000.

It would do more than help "the common people" of Florida. It would bring from other states hundreds of thousands of men with small incomes that would like to put their heads on their pillows at night and say:

"Thank God, this bed, this roof, and the ground under it are mine and free from taxation forever."

Why should everything that a man owns, everything needed to raise his children, be held subject to the clutching paw of some politician? What sort of sheep are the "free and independent" Americans that allow it?

Frank Hague, who runs the state of New Jersey most of the time, ought to pass a "no-tax on little homes" law in his state, and watch the small-income population of New York leak over into New Jersey.

California should have passed such a law long ago. It would add hundreds of thousands to her population and hundreds of millions to the state's annual spending power in short order.

THE ANSWER to "What is big news?" changes with your location. It may be a whale washed ashore in the Arctic, a hippopotamus successfully hamstrung in the Congo, a dividend increase in Wall street.

Florida's big news today is the shipment of the season's first "solid car" of oranges from Plant City. The Carey packing house ships it. Mayor-Commissioner Carey, of Plant City, will give it his blessing. It is his shipment and brings a good F. O. B. price in spite of depression.

IT SHOULD be repeated that when the value to health of oranges, lemons, grapefruits, their juices and their vitamin content, are fully appreciated, all the citrus lands in America—in Florida, Texas, along the Gulf coast, in California and in Arizona—will be unable to supply the demand.

Two things are important: First, to solve the problem of expensive distribution, or increase the public's buying power; second, to find a way to preserve, with all its value, the juice of the fruit and then avoid the present waste of undersized fruit.

THE FEDERAL government, helping the state's road building costs, demands a minimum wage rate on such work, varying in different localities. W. N. Doak, Secretary of Labor, fixes Florida's minimum rate at 20 cents an hour.

That rate, $2 for a 10-hour day at road building, would not be applauded in the North, but there is no violent protest here. In the warm states, with food cheap, no coal to buy, $2 a day means as good a living as four dollars a day in big northern cities.

THIS CITY, Jacksonville, which is to Florida what San Francisco is to California, an energetic business center, sets an example to other cities in its successful operation of publicly-owned city monopolies which have almost eliminated taxes.

That should interest New York, where it costs taxpayers more than six hundred million dollars a year for their government, one hundred million more than the total annual expenses of the United States before the big war started. Uncle Sam pumping billions to Europe and imagining himself the owner of a pocket without a bottom to it.

THE NOBLE state of Alabama seems to be getting ready for something, perhaps the end of prohibition. The Legislature has repealed a statute 17 years old prohibiting sale or possession of any beverage that "looks like, smells like or tastes like beer." That law was perhaps suggested by the Japanese:

"Speak no evil, hear no evil, see no evil."

The repeal was vetoed by Alabama's Governor, Miller, who feared it might be "an entering wedge." The Governor should know that near beer is a very dull entering wedge, much less dangerous than gin, which looks like water.

Don't judge men or drinks by their looks, or women, either.

NEW ENGLAND'S textile industry, already in a bad way, will not rejoice in the news that cotton mills in the South, a comparatively recent creation, used in the past year more than 4,000,000 bales of cotton, almost equaling the consumption of all other American mills combined, according to the manufacturers' record.

Some of the largest rayon plants in the world, recently installed in the South, increase its dominating strength in the textile field. Since 1925 the number of spindles installed in the South has increased one million five hundred thousand, which now passes 74 per cent of the nation's active spindles.

Mills next to the cotton fields, with cheap labor plentiful, form a powerful combination.

SOCIETY GIRL ROUTS THUG IN HOME

Struggles With Thief Looting Bedroom in East End House

A robber who grabbed 16-year-old Sarah McDowell by the wrist as she turned on the light in her room in the D. F. H. McDowell home at 5336 Fifth avenue, was being sought by police today as the society girl recovers from her fright.

As the girl screamed the robber attempted to stifle her cries, then ceased and fled through a window on to the porch roof and escaped. Miss McDowell collapsed on the stairway as her father and mother rushed to her aid.

While servants were busy in the rear of the house and Mr. and Mrs. McDowell and their daughter were in the living room, the intruder had climbed to the second story and entered the room.

Mrs. McDowell had prepared the room for the night and left a night lamp burning. A few minutes later her daughter went to her room. She noticed the door was closed. She thought it strange, listened a moment, and then opened the door. As she reached her hand inside the room to turn on the light, the robber grasped her by the wrist. She screamed and the man stepped forward and attempted to catch her by the throat. As her father and mother started up the stairs, the robber released his hold, dashed across the room, and climbed out the window through which he had entered, Mrs. McDowell said.

Freed from the robber, the girl ran to the steps where she collapsed. After being revived she told her parents that the intruder was a white man, but was unable to give a detailed description.

Examination of the room showed the robber had ransacked the room completely. Contents of the dresser and vanity had been strewn over the floor and a jewel case searched.

Seized by Robber

16-YEAR-OLD SARAH M'DOWELL . . SHE WON OVER A BURGLAR

Miss Sarah, daughter of the socially-prominent D. F. H. McDowells, seized by a robber in her room in the McDowells' Fifth avenue home. She screamed and collapsed, he fled over a roof as parents, servants ran to her aid. She suffered only fright in the experience.

For the first time since Pitt has been Pitt and Duquesne has been Duquesne, the rival universities will pit their elevens against one another.

Nixon to Be Closed Unless Union Yields

Manager Harry Brown, of the Nixon Theater, said last night he had been advised by the Nixon's New York office to close the playhouse after next week's Theater Guild production unless members of the musicians' union agreed to the management's new terms providing for five men in the pit for a 20-week season with extras for musical shows. The union demands 10 men in the pit with no pay decreases.

Lawyers Act In War on Shysters

Initial action in the Allegheny County Bar Association's war on shyster practice among attorneys of the county occurred today when a temporary injunction was granted the association's committee, restraining George B. Crawford, Pittsburgh Adjustment Bureau head, from soliciting legal work.

The committee, in asking for the injunction, alleged that Crawford obtained a list of traffic accidents each day from the Public Safety Department and approached the people involved, giving them advice and suggesting that he retain attorneys for them.

Judge Heber Ditnrica fixed Thursday as the day for the final hearing on the injunction. Both the bureau and Crawford, identified as an investigator for certain lawyers, are restrained from soliciting legal work.

The restraining order was obtained by the committee headed by Gifford K. Wright, Judge James R. Macfarlane, presiding judge of Common Pleas Court, appointed the committee.

PASTOR SLAIN, CORONER HOLDS

A blow from a blunt weapon, rather than a fall, caused the skull fracture that resulted in the death of the Rev. Isiah Hawn, 77, retired Reformed Church minister, Coroner W. J. McGregor and Dr. A. W. McMeans, coroner's physician, decided after an autopsy.

When this information was communicated to homicide detectives, Lieut. Frank Ferris detailed men to act with Deputy Coroner John Artz, and re-enact the attack at the Frendship School, Friendship avenue and Roup street, where the aged minister was found fatally injured early Tuesday morning.

Following Hawn's death in West Penn Hospital yesterday, Dr. McMeans performed an autopsy.

Michael Phones Mother 'I Miss You So Much'

PARIS, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—The continental edition of the London Daily Mail said today the 10-year-old Crown Prince Michael, of Rumania, succeeded in telephoning his mother, Princess Helen, at London, from here, and that his first words were:

"Oh, Mummy! I've missed you so much."

The young Prince left London Wednesday and came to France, after a two weeks' visit with his mother. Princess Helen was quoted in a London newspaper as saying the visit was broken off by King Carol, her estranged husband, because he objected to publicity given the mother and son. This was denied later by King Carol.

Michael told his mother he was going to visit Versailles, the paper said, and that his uncle, Prince Nicholas, who left Rumania several months ago after a reported quarrel with his brother, planned to take him to the auto show.

The prince was to leave today for Sigmarigen, where, his father said, he was invited to hunt.

EXTRADITION OF INSULL ASKED

Wife Faces Quiz on Utilities King's Whereabouts

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT
International News Service.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—Instructions requesting the extradition of Samuel Insull, erstwhile utilities magnate, of Chicago, were received by the United States embassy here today.

The instructions, sent to the embassy from Washington, were immediately handed over to the French foreign office.

This new and sensational development in the case of the former Chicago multi-millionaire power "king," now under indictment for embezzlement and larceny, served to strengthen belief here that Insull was secretly secluded somewhere within the Paris area.

WIFE FACES QUIZ

Paris police today made plans to question Mrs. Insull in an effort to learn the whereabouts of her husband.

A high official said:

"It is natural that we will ask Mrs. Insull what she knows about her husband's whereabouts.

"However, she will not be obliged to answer. Any information she may give must be given voluntarily. There is no way in which we can compel her to divulge her husband's whereabouts or the itinerary he took when he left the hotel."

The foreign office declined to discuss the extradition proceedings at any length. A spokesman said:

"We are studying the request to decide whether it conforms to the extradition treaty.

"If we find that it does, we

Homeless, Ends Life By Decapitation

The decapitated body of a man, about 50, found along the Panhandle Railroad tracks at Cherry mine, near Rennerdale in Collier Township, today was listed at the morgue as an unidentified suicide.

Morgue deputies said the victim had evidently placed his head over a rail and awaited the coming of a freight train. In the pockets was less than a dollar's change, and a form letter from A. W. Grotefend, director of Central Application Bureau for Homeless men, 211 Wood street, to whom the victim had applied for relief.

Gang Ride Inventor Dies of Pneumonia

BEARDSTOWN, Ill., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Frankie McErlane, inventor of the "one-way ride" in Chicago liquor wars, died in bed at a hospital today of pneumonia.

He had escaped hundreds of bullets from gangland enemies, and was credited with slaying several persons after he introduced machine guns to gangdom. He was once charged with slaying his wife and her two dogs, found dead in an automobile.

O'Brien's Nomination Happy Solution of Mayoralty Problem

MR. CURRY made a gratifying and dramatic solution of the New York mayoralty problem.

The nomination of Surrogate O'Brien shows Mr. Curry to be a local and a national leader of the first rank.

Surrogate O'Brien is an able and honorable man of high standing with all classes of the community.

His nomination will please all classes and unite all factions.

Mr. O'Brien's immediate and whole-hearted indorsement of Roosevelt is evidence of the man's loyalty, as well as of his wisdom and judgment.

Mr. O'Brien is frank and honest and forthright.

He says what he means and means what he says.

He is a Democrat, and that means both a Tammany Democrat and a Roosevelt Democrat.

It means a New York Democrat and a national Democrat.

Mr. O'Brien is not factional nor sectional.

There is no qualification of the word Democrat with Surrogate O'Brien.

He does not merely want to use the party for himself. He prefers to devote himself to the party.

He is not self-interested nor self-seeking.

He did not want the nomination for Mayor of New York, but he accepted it, and that means he accepted all its obligations and will do his full duty to the party and to the public.

SURROGATE O'BRIEN is not merely able. He is experienced.

He knows New York. He knows what New York people want and he will try to give it to them.

He is not a self-advertiser nor a time-server.

He will not suddenly develop qualities which seem useful in a campaign and which he had shown no evidences of possessing in all his previous career.

The surrogate is furthermore a serious, sober, earnest, public-spirited man, who will give his whole-hearted attention to his work and to the public welfare.

MAYOR WALKER, arraigned for malfeasance in office, may not have been guilty of any betrayal of trust. The evidence did not seem to show that he was, but he was very definitely guilty of neglect of obligations.

He made a joke of the mayoralty of New York City, which is one of the highest and most dignified offices in the nation.

The situation requires a mayor more appreciative of his grave responsibilities.

Still, the administration of Mayor Walker should not be dismissed without recognition of the great work the man did in maintaining the five-cent fare on the city transportation lines and in extending and improving the city's schools.

"The evil that men do lives after them;
The good is oft interred with their bones."

SURROGATE O'BRIEN will have Walker's popular qualities, his public interest, and he will have in addition the seriousness, the conscientious attention to the duties of his high office, which Mayor Walker unfortunately lacked.

The public of New York's great metropolis should be happy at the nomination of Surrogate O'Brien.

The Democratic party throughout the nation should be pleased at this evidence of Tammany's wisdom and loyalty, and Mr. Curry should be altogether delighted that through ability and sincerity he has been able to handle a difficult problem with so much benefit to the public and the party and so much credit to himself.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

WOMAN, HER CAR SEIZED, IS VICTIM

Two Fleeing Robbers Among Wounded; 3 May Die

CLEVELAND, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Six persons were shot, three of them perhaps fatally, in a downtown running gun fight between police and two bandits today following a frustrated attempt to hold up a diamond merchant.

Those shot were:

QUINLAN, HERBERT, jeweler, reported near death from a bullet wound in the abdomen.

BLAZIER, FRED, patrolman, shot in the right side, also reported near death.

MARTIN, MRS. FLORENCE, shot in the head three times, condition critical.

HEISLEY, DETECTIVE JOHN.

Two unidentified bandits.

Quinlan was shot in the side by one of the two robbers when his father, Edmond S. Quinlan, diamond broker, jumped at the holdup men shouting:

"You dirty dogs."

The elder Quinlan was struck over the head with the butt of a gun and the robbers fled.

A desperate gun fight with police ensued when the robbers, fleeing from the scene, commandeered an automobile in which Mrs. Martin and her daughter were seated.

Patrolman Blazier was shot as he attempted to stop the bandits from commandeering the car, which was at a parking lot.

Detectives Roy Heisley and Thomas Osborne, who had been called to the scene, gave chase in another machine. The two cars raced and zig-zagged through traffic on Euclid avenue, the robbers shooting all the time. The detectives returned the fire.

At East Seventy-third street, Mrs. Martin, who apparently had been driving with one of the bandit's guns pressed against her head, was wounded, and her car careened against the curb, throwing her daughter into the street.

The capture of the bandits followed. The police said they had fired 86 shots in all at the fleeing car and 26 of them struck, riddling the rear of Mrs. Martin's machine.

Heisley did not realize he was wounded until he helped take the women to a hospital. He was not seriously hurt.

Blood transfusions were asked for Blazier and Herbert Quinlan.

Pittsburgh Mine Men Discuss Job Problem With N. Y. Governor

By RAYMOND I. BORST
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Oct. 8.—Back in his own home for the first time since his invasion of the West, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt today was to be feted by his old friends and neighbors of Dutchess County and Western Connecticut.

At Washington Hollow, 10 miles from this village, where the old Dutchess County Fair was held for many years, the Democratic presidential nominee was to be welcomed home by men and women who helped to start him on his political career 20 years ago as a state Senator.

Over the week-end the Governor planned to begin drafting the itinerary for his campaign trip through the South, starting October 17.

When Gov. Roosevelt motored here last night he left former Senator James E. Reed, of Missouri, at the legislative mansoon in Albany working on a speech which the latter will deliver Monday night in Des Moines in answer to President Hoover's recent speech in that city.

Senator Reed said:

"President Hoover's speech at Des Moines contained more false conclusions and more mis-information of facts than any other campaign speech in my memory. The only thing that stands out in the speech is that Mr. Hoover pathetically tells the people that he has been awful sorry for them and has been trying to help them."

MEETS PITTSBURGHERS

Before coming here, Gov. Roosevelt discussed the problems of the miners with a committee representing the American Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers.

Those who conferred with Gov. Roosevelt included Edward F. McGrady, chairman of the legislative committee of the American Federation of Labor; Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers; Thomas Kennedy, secretary; Henry Warrum, general counsel; Earl Houck, of Indianapolis; Frank Hughes and David McDonald, of Pittsburgh, and Edward Lynch, of Hazleton, Pa.

STRAUS FIRM TO APPEAL

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Officials of S. W. Straus & Co., Inc., made plans today to appeal a Supreme Court ruling ordering the concern into receivership.

The company, for years one of the most important investment houses in the United States, was ordered into receivership yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Alfred V. Norton at the application of Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr.

The court acted after the state charged junior securities were sold to customers who were under the impression they were obtaining first mortgage bonds, and that bonds were sold which were not in good standing because the properties behind them had previously defaulted on taxes. Nicholas Roberts, president of the corporation, said:

"In so far as any of the practices complained of by the Attorney General were ever employed by the S. W. Straus & Co., Inc., they were voluntarily discontinued more than 18 months ago. The case will be promptly and vigorously appealed."

Sheriff Kills Crazed Prisoner in Jail

WEISER, Idaho, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Thomas Paine, 52, Negro, was shot to death in jail yesterday by Sheriff James W. Campbell during an attempt to quiet the man in what officers said was an insane outburst.

Paine, a barber shop porter, was arrested after two attempts at suicide. Sheriff Campbell said the prisoner hit him on the head with a piece of coal. A coroner's jury found the sheriff fired in self defense.

shall immediately turn it over to the ministry of justice for action."

ARREST EXPECTED

The opinion was expressed in informed quarters that once the Paris police were definitely set on Insull's trail, it would not be long before his whereabouts were revealed.

Officials pointed out that previously no effort had been made to apprehend Insull, who dropped from sight with his son, Samuel Insull, Jr., Wednesday morning.

They said they felt sure, however, that Insull would never be able to elude an organized official search.

Although the belief mounted Insull and his son were concealed somewhere in this city, authorities throughout Europe were reported still on the lookout for the pair.

Rumors that Insull had gone to Italy appeared groundless following receipt of advices from there such reports had been characterized as "ridiculous," and that officials had no ground for supposing he had entered the country.

This opinion was strengthened by private investigation in Paris, which showed Insull never registered at the Hotel Lincoln, where his wife has remained, but from which Insull and his son were reported to have disappeared.

BROTHER SEEKS FREEDOM

BARRIE, Ont., Oct. 8.—(INS.)—The fight to obtain Martin J. Insull's freedom on bail from the Simcoe County Jail was being pushed today by a group of high-priced lawyers.

It was not improbable, reports had it, that before the day was ended an application would be made to admit the brother of Samuel Insull to bail. Already overtures to this end have been made to Cook County State's Attorney's counsel in Ontario.

Of the two visitors Insull has had since he entered the grim jail on the hill Thursday night, one was a member of his legal staff, Attorney J. M. Boys, of Barrie, the other Dr. C. S. Wainright, of Orillia, who examained the 68-year-old prisoner, whose health is not the best.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Former Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, a Democrat, told newspapermen here that he felt "like publicly apologizing" for having supported President Hoover in 1928. He said:

"His administration has been the most colossal failure in history and no apology can explain it. I feel like publicly apologizing for having supported him."

Soon after reaching the United States he was said to have come to Pittsburgh and working in a Smithfield street restaurant. Later he resided in Youngstown and Chicago and returned here three days ago, it was said.

BUSINESS MEN TO AID COUNCIL DRAFT TAXES

Way For Special City Levy Opened At Hearing

Plans were under way today for the formation of a committee by Council President John S. Herron to assist Council's finance committee in planning new taxes on commodities, operations and privileges not previously taxed by the state or federal governments.

Council decided to name such a committee after a hearing yesterday at which representatives of numerous civic and business organizations were heard and suggestions made.

Speakers included J. W. Bamford, of the Building Owners and Managers Association; Thomas Dunn, president of the Chamber of Commerce; R. T. McIntosh, president of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board; M. J. Grady, Edgar J. Kaufmann, president of the Retail Merchants Association and the Fifth Avenue Businessmen's Association; W. G. Negley, of the Allied Boards of Trade, and John Dimling, I. Leonard Aronson and Thomas Liggett, all large real estate holders.

Herron said the committee would be selected from among the persons attending the hearing and other businessmen.

Council was given authority to assess special taxes to relieve the burden on real estate at the last special session of the Legislature. Revenue from the contemplated taxes will be used to help meet the deficit looming for 1933.

COX WILL MAKE EASTERN TOUR

A stumping campaign of Pennsylvania and New England will be begun the week of October 16 by Father James R. Cox, Jobless party candidate for President, he said today. His automobile caravan, which he left in Texas, is expected to arrive in Pittsburgh next week.

The first lap of the trip will be to Philadelphia, towns on the William Penn highway being visited.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 8.—Misfortune trailed members of the Jobless party tour caravan across three states yesterday, a blowout in Missouri, about 40 miles west of St. Louis, almost sent their broadcasting car, traveling at high speed off the road.

Last night the campaigners were confronted with further delay in their homeward journey to Pittsburgh when they discovered funds were low. However, a long distance telephone call to Father James R. Cox, the presidential nominee of the party, brought assurance they will be able to resume the journey today.

Eaton Given Full Authority to Push P. S. C. Inquiry

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 8.—Oliver K. Eaton, of Pittsburgh, as chief counsel for the Senate Utilities Committee, has been given complete authority to carry on an investigation of charges by Gov. Pinchot against the Public Service Commission and certain utilities or their officials.

Eaton will have before him next week complete records of previous utility investigations, copies of charges made by the Governor as well as evidence he submitted to the Senate, and data from the Public Service Commission on rate decisions covering a period of years.

Among the decisions will be those covering taxicab conditions in Pittsburgh, the amalgamation of the Yellow, Green and Red companies, the fixing of rates and the findings in which competition was barred.

By Friday of next week Eaton expects to be able to proceed with open hearings, but the first witnesses will be officials of the P. S. C., who will identify documents. The initial stages of the investigation will involve the laying of a foundation on which to proceed in succeeding weeks. Only in that way, Eaton and Senator William S. Rial, chairman of the committee explains, could there be real revelations.

The scope of the committee's work, as outlined yesterday when Eaton was made chief counsel, will involve months of hearings and investigation, and will extend through the sessions of the Legislature next winter.

No invitation to testify has yet been extended former Commissioner James S. Benn, who, Gov. Pinchot alleges, banked enormous sums while he was on the commission at a salary of $10,000 a year.

Sister of Curtis Guest Of Women; to Speak In Wilkinsburg

Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister of Vice President Curtis, and chief woman campaigner of the Hoover forces, arrived in Pittsburgh today from a tour of the Middle West, optimistic of the chances of the Republican ticket. She said:

"Everything looks lovely for Mr. Hoover."

She will address a mass meeting tonight in the Wilkinsburg High School auditorium.

'EVERYTHING LOVELY'

As to the President's prospects, Mrs. Gann said:

"I have had perfectly marvelous meetings everywhere through the West. I have spoken in cities and towns of Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Wisconsin. Everything looks lovely for Mr. Hoover."

As to the attitude of women voters, Mrs. Gann said:

Powell, president of the Women's Republican Club of Western Pennsylvania, and was taken in the latter's automobile to her home at 30 Hoodridge drive, Mt. Lebanon, for breakfast.

SNIPER SHOOTS 2 IN CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(INS.)—The "Phantom Sniper," ruthless gunman who terrorized the national capital last winter, today was believed to have resumed his activities.

Police announced that a young bandit who last night shot down two men, held up two filling stations and a drug store and stole two automobiles, answers the description of the "Phantom Sniper."

Police "flying squad" cars renewed their search of the city in the hope of running down the mysterious gunman who escaped the dragnet set for him last winter, after he had killed one man and wounded several.

One of last night's victims, a filling station attendant, is in Emergency Hospital with a bullet in his abdomen. An attendant at another filling station was shot in the side.

In neither of these holdups did the bandit obtain any money. Shortly afterward, however, he held up a drugstore and seized $150.

Roosevelt Sure Winner, Rogers Tells Mexico

Universal Service.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 8.—Will Rogers dropped in on Mexico City from the air today to voice the prediction that Gov. Roosevelt "will win decisively."

The cowboy comedian, en route from Los Angeles to the Argentine by air, said this with all solemnity. His wrinkled face cracked into a smile, however, when he added:

"The most interesting campaign in the United States is going on in Texas. Half of them want a woman; half of them a man."

Rogers called on President Rodriguez, Gen. Calles and American Ambassador Clark. To the President he remarked:

"It looks like this country has got a new lease on life."

Allen Arrested Again; Larceny Suspect

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—(INS.)—William W. Allen, society horseman and brother of Rose and Eddie Allen, was arrested again early today on a drunken driving charge.

He was picked up in West Philadelphia and taken to a police station. Police Surgeon Cherner pronounced him intoxicated.

Besides the drunken driving charge, the youth also was booked on a charge of suspicion of larceny.

Young Allen was placed in a cell for several hours without an attempt being made to obtain his release on bail.

It was the second time he had been arrested this week. On Wednesday he was held on a number of charges, including one of operating an automobile while intoxicated, when the car he was driving struck a milk wagon, injuring the driver.

BRIDE-SEIZING CHICAGO GANG FEARED

Troops March Around House During Ceremony

TAYLORSVILLE, Ill., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Miss Mary Kinney and Henry Holmes Porter, Jr., wealthy Chicagoan, were married last night while 25 National Guardsmen and special officers walked post around the home of the bride's father, Lloyd E. Kinney, apparently afraid that a kidnaping or robbery might be attempted.

No information was divulged by members of the family, but local authorities said they had received information from Chicago that a robbery or kidnaping might have been planned. Prominent families in Chicago and Evanston, Ill., recently have been the victims of attempted extortion plots.

The bridegroom is a nephew of Mrs. Parmalee Prentice, sister of the late Edith Rockefeller McCormick. He and his bride plan to spend their honeymoon at Manchester, Vt., and on their return will reside in Chicago.

FLIER SAVES 4, DIES IN CRASH

GODALMING, Surrey, Eng., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Two British flying officers were dead today as a result of the crash of a giant bombing plane near here last night and four of their companions owed their lives to the 21-year-old pilot, who remained with the ship and died to give them a chance to drop to safety with parachutes.

Pilot officer Bernard Gully saw that the plane, which was flying high, was sure to crash and shouted to his comrades:

"Jump for it, boys, I'm going to see it through!"

Four of the men jumped and alighted safely,—except for a broken leg sustained by one. A fifth, Arthur Page, Gully's fellow officer, stayed in the plane, but apparently was persuaded later to jump. By this time the plane was near the ground. His parachute failed to open instantly and he was killed.

Gully, the pilot, burned to death when the ship exploded near the ground as he was still trying to maneuver it to a landing. The crew said he could have saved his own life by jumping.

Italian King Feted By African Tribes

AGORDAT, Eritrea, East Africa, Oct. 8.—(Universal.)—King Victor Emmanuel was received here by his African subjects yesterday with honors that were of old accorded only an Oriental potentate.

DOPE RING LINK SMASHED IN RAID HERE

Police Uncover Opium Smuggled Under Guise of Tea

A Pittsburgh branch of a nation-wide narcotic ring alleged to have distributed opium concealed in packages of tea with Negro messengers to alloy suspicion, was revealed in a Chinatown raid last night, Detective Walter Monaghan testified in Central Police Court today.

Nine Chinese and three Negroes, all except one arrested in a raid on 515 Second avenue, were turned over to federal narcotic agents by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg.

Monaghan testified that detectives had trailed Simpson Lawrence, Negro, of 51 Crawford street, to an express company office in Liberty avenue where he tried to send a package by express. In the package, Monaghan said, was found half a pound of opium hidden in tea. A raid on the Chinatown resort followed, resulting in seizure of 15 pounds of raw opium valued at $2,500.

According to Monaghan, the opium is smuggled into New York and sent by express to various distributing centers.

Those arrested in addition to Simpson were George Fisher, 48, of Leonra street, and Isaac Siebrook, Negroes, alleged runners, and Lee Bo Hing, 46; Hary Wong, 41; Tom Woo, 28; Lee Bin, 25; George Lee, 24; Lee Shoo, 55; Tom Lee, 61; Lee Qung, 60, and Ching Lee, 57.

"Quick, hand over the contents of the cash register."

CHAPLIN, SONS DRAW CROWDS

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Sight-seers on Hollywood boulevard went home last night well satisfied, for they had been present at the first recent appearance in public of Charles Chaplin, film comedian, with his two sons, Sydney and Charles, Jr.

The comedian appeared unexpectedly at a popular cafe, which film fans haunt, and before long a jam had been created at the doors with photographers, professional and amateur, shooting from every angle. Chaplin vainly tried to escape the picture-takers.

Leaving the cafe, he and the boys went to a toy department of a store, where the crowd found great amusement in the futile efforts of a floor walker to eject the photographers.

GILLETTE TRIAL JUDGE DIES

HERKIMER, N. Y., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Former Supreme Court Justice Irving R. Devendorf, who gained national prominence as the presiding judge in the Chester Gillette murder case in 1906, died at his home here today. He was 75.

As Supreme Court justice in 1906 he sentenced young Gillette to death for the drowning of his factory-girl sweetheart, Grace Brown. Theodore Dreiser used the case as the foundation for his novel, "An American Tragedy."

Speaking of his experience as a judge in murder cases, he once said, without mentioning the Gillette case:

"I can still see the faces of the defendants who appeared before me in cases of murder, first degree, those I sentenced to die in the electric chair. I have presided at many murder cases, but it is only the defendants I sentenced to the chair that I can remember."

Later he commandeered a truck and forced the driver to speed through the city streets, and finally wound up by taking a shot at his superior officer, Capt. J. A. GUARDS JEERED TORTURED BOY IN SWEATBOX

Witness Tells Details Of Brutality in Murder Trial

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—A picture of "brutal guards" who "work men until they drop," and tolerate only "stool pigeons," was added today to tales of mistreatment of Arthur Maillefert, for whose death in a prison camp sweat box former Capt. George Courson and Guard Solomon Higginbotham are on trial for murder.

James L. Travis, serving 12 years for robbery, drew the picture yesterday as a prosecution witness. Maillefert was found strangled to death in the sweat box, with a chain around his neck and heavy stocks on his feet. Travis was a fellow prisoner with him at the Sunbeam Prison camp near Jacksonville.

BARREL TORTURE TOLD

E. L. Smith, another convict who served with Maillefert, testified that the day before the prisoner died June 3, a heavy barrel was placed on his unclothed body, fastened by planks and straps across his shoulders and he was allowed to roam about the camp yard in the rain.

That night Maillefert was placed in the sweatbox, still in the barrel and next morning when the door was opened he rolled out on the ground, Smith said:

"Capt. Courson and some guards stood by and laughed as he tried to get up from where he fell on the ground in the rain."

Travis declared:

"If you ain't a stool pigeon at camp you don't get along."

Smith said that while Maillefert lay on the ground, "a couple of little dogs came up about that time and began to lick him."

CHAIN LOCKED ON NECK

He and other convicts testified that when Maillefert was placed in the sweat box—an instrument of punishment prescribed by the Florida Legislature in place of the lash—Higginbotham locked the chain about the convict's neck and fastened the other end to a rafter overhead.

Once when Maillefert was returned after an attempted escape, the witness said, he was forced to jump off a truck on which he rode with several dogs. He continued:

"Then somebody made one of the dogs jump off the truck. Higginbotham told whoever it was: 'Don't make them dogs jump off that truck—they might hurt themselves.'"

County Detective W. H. Gasque, who made the investigation that led to indictment of Courson and Higginbotham, detailed how he found the wooden stocks and chain at the prison camp when he went there after a Justice of the Peace had ruled Maillefert's death a suicide and said no inquest would be held.

Capt. Courson told him under questioning he said that the chain was about Maillefert's neck and the stocks on his feet when he died in the sweat box. Gasque said Courson told him Maillefert was an unruly convict "determined to escape and I was determined for him not to escape."

Greatest of Jewish Fasts to Begin At Sundown

The greatest fast of the Jewish year, Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, will be observed starting tomorrow at sundown by Jews throughout the world. Pittsburgh synagogues have planned services for tomorrow night and Monday.

The holiday, equal in importance to Rosh Hashana, observed last week, is a solemn day climaxing the Ten Days of Penitence which precede it. From the evening of the ninth day of the Hebrew month Tishri until the evening of the next day, the Jew neither eats nor drinks, devoting the day to worship in the synagogue.

In biblical times, the holiday was a priestly festival, the high priest making atonement for the entire House of Israel by sacrifices and the symbolic rite of driving the scapegoat into the wilderness bearing the sins of the people with it. Gradually the observance was modified, until today the 24 hours is devoted to prayer and the avoidance of sordid thoughts.

The day is truly a Sabbath of Sabbaths, but the prayers now contain no idea of sacrifice, rather repentance through a determination to live cleanly.

During the afternoon of the Day of Atonement a memorial service is held. Prayers are offered to the memories and ideals of the departed. Special white vestments and altar decorations are used in many synagogues for the services.

NOON SERVICES AT TRINITY

Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—President Hoover appears to have Gov. Roosevelt stopped in Iowa.

For the second consecutive week the President received practically an even break with his Democratic opponent in Iowa returns in the nation-wide postcard Presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

The tide turned with the announcement that President Hoover would go to Iowa to speak.

It is too soon yet to measure the effect of the Des Moines speech itself, but it is apparent that his decision to carry his campaign in person into the state of his birth won back some of the normally Republican support that had been drifting away week after week until a fortnight ago.

Today 1,108 new ballots were tabulated from Iowa. Roosevelt got an insignificant four majority. Last week 1,355 Iowa ballots were received, of which Hoover got a majority of one. Thus, out of 2,463 ballots received in the last two weeks, Roosevelt has won a bare majority of three. This is in striking contrast to the 204 majority he received in the weekly returns three weeks ago and 487 the week before that.

The returns of the last two weeks represent approximately one-fourth of the 9,799 Iowa ballots now in hand. The 1,115 majority that Roosevelt holds on the total returns was acquired during the early stages of the postcard balloting.

Iowa thus appears the chief battleground of the corn belt.

SMITH TO SPEAK FOR ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—News that Alfred E. Smith is going on the stump in the interests of Democratic victory in November made a stir in political circles today.

The 1928 Democratic standard bearer, it was learned definitely, plans at present to speak in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and New York. Whether there will be visits to other states was not indicated.

The news followed hard upon the dramatic handshake between the former Governor and Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt when they met on the platform at the Democratic state convention in Albany Tuesday.

Ex-Vice Consul Admits Rum Sale

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Pleas of guilty to charges of selling and transporting liquor illegally were made by Leopold Lacayo, former vice consul for Nicaragua in Los Angeles, and Pedro Velez in Federal Court. Permission was given both defendants to file applications for probation and they were released on their own recognizance.

Her Plaintiff Ill

ROSALINDA MORINI .... OTTO KAHN CAN'T GO TO COURT

Miss Morini, the opera singer suing Millionaire Otto Kahn, patron of the arts, for $250,000 damages, whose case may leave the courtroom for the Kahn home for his testimony. His physician in an affadavit sets forth that Mr. Kahn cannot go to court.

TEACHER URGES EX-PUPILS VOTE

Today is the last day to register, and one high school teacher has reminded his former students of the fact by sending them cards.

Percy B. Caley, who teaches problems of democracy at Schenley High School, has sent 180 cards to those who were his pupils in 1929. He said:

"I figured they would all be of voting age now, so I sent out cards reminding them to register. It may do some good."

The cards say:

"You now have the opportunity of assuming your just share of the duties and responsibilities of an American citizen! Register on October 8 (your last chance this fall) and vote as your conscience and reason dictate on election day, November eighth."

Registration was lower here this year than last year, 93,020 against 122,189 for 1931. A Harrisburg report said that in the 10 cities of the state only 55 per cent of the last presidential total is registered.

OTTO KAHN ILL, AVOIDS TRIAL

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(Universal.)—Otto Kahn, banker and philanthropist, is so ill that if he were forced to testify in court, the excitement and strain "might very well prove fatal," it was disclosed today.

The revelation came in an affidavit filed by Dr. Charles G. Taylor, Kahn's physician, in Supreme Court in connection with the suit brought against the banker for $250,000 damages by Rosalinda Morini, opera singer.

The affidavit was in support of a motion by Kahn's attorneys to have the banker examined at his home. It revealed Kahn has been treated ever since his return from abroad, August 21, for high blood pressure and angina pectoris "with a complicating pulmonitis." The affidavit added that his "condition is such that an appearance in court would place his life in jeopardy."

Justice McCook ordered that the banker's testimony be taken at his home October 13. Miss Morini charged Kahn praised her voice and then denied having said she had "one of the most beautiful voices I have ever heard."

WOMEN VOTERS HEAR HOOVER CITE ISSUES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Upon women voters today was placed by President Hoover "a large measure of the responsibility" for determining in November "whether proven measures now winning this battle against depression shall be exchanged for unknown experiments."

Also, the President said by radio yesterday, the feminine electorate must help decide at the polls "the course to be pursued by the nation for many years to come in the solution" of three great tasks. He designated them as follows:

"The first of these is the battle for recovery from the depression which is now in the stage of winning counter-attack on a long extended front.

"Second, we must correct economic weaknesses and wrongs which have been brought vividly to the surface in the depression. We must set up protection against recurrence of these terrible calamities for the future.

"Third, we must advance political and social organization for the accomplishment of the real purposes of life, which are security and independence of the family and the home, wider opportunity and equal opportunity for the individual."

Mr. Hoover spoke from the White House during a "Hoover Day" celebration arranged by the women's division of the Republican National Committee.

DURANT BOLTS HOOVER FOLD

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(Universal.)—Giving numerous caustic reasons for his switch, William C. Durant, American automobile manufacturer, cabled the Democratic National Committee from Paris that he has joined the growing thousands of Republicans who will vote for Gov. Roosevelt. He declared:

"The Hoover administration has no parallel for inefficiency since the establishment of our government.

"I voted and worked for the election of Herbert Hoover in 1928. I shall not vote for Hoover next November, nor will hundreds of thousands of Republicans who, like myself, are interested in his retirement to private life.

"Frankklin D. Roosevelt, a man of integrity and ability, will, in my opinion, be elected by an overwhelming majority."

Washington Youth Hurt in Train Leap

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Robert Manon, 18, of Washington, Pa., and John Ebenrick, 24, of St. Louis, were struck by a freight train yesterday and hurt seriously. Manon has a fractured skull, a broken leg, fractured shoulder and internal injuries. Doctors have despaired of his recovery.

They jumped from a freight train en route to Texas and stepped into the path of another train.

Rapee Plays Holy Land Melodies

Judaism's contribution to world music is reflected in Erno Rapee's 60-minute concert on WCAE tonight at 9, when an augmented orchestra and chorus are heard in another of Rapee's musical travelogues.

Under the title "With Erno Rapee in the Holy Land," songs, operatic selections and traditional melodies of the Jewish race are presented in keeping with the spirit of the current religious season.

Miss Clark

With Aileen Clark, coloratura soprano; Viola Philo, soprano; Fred Hufsmith, tenor, and Oswaldo Mazzuchi, 'cellist, as soloists, Rapee offers Lewandowski's "Hallelujah Chorus," "The Shadow Song," from Meyerbeer's "Dinorah," "Eli, Eli," a recently accepted Hebrew folk song, and a concert transcription for 'cello of "Kol Nidre." The program is brought to a close with Mana Zucca's "Rachem," a melody depicting the sorrow of the race.

Graham McNamee's description of the Columbia-Princeton game at Baker Field is scheduled over WCAE today from 2:15 to 5 p. m. A detailed account of the Minneapolis-Purdue game in the Minneapolis Stadium by Bill Bronson, sports reporter of KSTP, and a new personality in the field of network football broadcasting, is heard on KDKA from 2:45 to 5:30. Ted Husing's play-by-play report of the Northwestern Michigan game at Ann Arbor is a WJAS feature beginning at 1:45. Program Pointers

George Ade's rollicking comedy of campus life, "The College Widow," is presented for the first time over the air during the "S. R. O." broadcast on KDKA at 9:30 tonight. Peggy Allenby appears in the title role supported by Allyn Joslyn and Florence Malone . . . Ben Bernie, the "Ol' Maestro," and the lads make their debut on the Magic Carpet with a typical program of dance music and jest on WCAE tonight at 10. Bernie's band, the seventy-first musical aggregation to appear on these programs, shares honors with the internationally known operetta stars, Evelyn Herbert and Robert Halliday, and Louis Katzman's Orchestra.

Irene Taylor is one of the smallest adult performers on NBC networks. She's 4 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 108 pounds. Already the Whiteman organization is calling her "Half-pint" . . . In Kansas City, where she made her debut with the Coon Sanders orchestra, she's remembered as "Kid" Taylor . . . That program sent from the United States to Germany on President Paul von Hindenburg's eighty-fifth birthday was recorded on wax and presented to the President as a souvenir.

Pittsburgh Dialer: The announcer on that 9:30 program Friday night, September 30, featuring Eddie and Ralph with Roy Shield's orchestra, was Vincent Pelletier. The program originated in NBC's Chicago studios.

Olive West, NBC actress, says she thinks she rates at least a directorship in the "I Knew Him When" club . . . She played with Bela Lugosi, the film arch-villain, when he did handsome hero roles on the stage.

Paul Whiteman's Orchestra has moved from the Biltmore Cascades to the Biltmore supper room for the winter season.

Julia Sanderson and her husband, Frank Crumit, have made an agreement. Julia says that she'll go to every football game this fall with Frank if he will promise to go to furniture auctions (her weakness, by the way) at least one day a week. Fair enough.

It's Pleasant Now To Lose FAT

Losing weight up until now meant a great sacrifice. It meant strenuous exercise, taking bitter-tasting salts and dangerous drugs, giving up the foods you enjoyed the most. Now all this is over. You can still lose unwanted weight, but you can do it safely and pleasantly.

A famous chemist and specialist in weight reduction devised the Harvin System of Reducing, which makes losing fat pleasant and safe. The chemist developed Harvin Salts and the specialist, the Harvin Plan of Eating. Harvin Salts, as delightful to take as an after-dinner mint, hasten slenderness by stimulating sluggish glands—the cause of 80% of overweight. Harvin Salts also help by keeping your intestinal tract free of all waste and poisonous matter and by correcting excessive acidity. The Harvin Plan of Eating is unusually effective in getting rid of excess weight and in keeping your figure slender and supple. Yet, unlike ordinary diets, the Harvin Plan of Eating allows you to have the foods you enjoy most. Even sweets are not denied. Start today toward a slender figure and a lovely radiant complexion. WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States. It also shows the majority that each candidate has in each state in which he is leading. In addition it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each state as compared with the last preceding report from the state. These state reports are usually a week apart. The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each state where he has improved his position as compared with the preceding report from that state.

In the East the fashionables are obeying President Hoover's behest to spend: the debutantes' parents there are not curtailing their entertainments.

A notable debutante party in the East was the dance last night in the New Haven Club, New Haven, Conn., at which Prof. Edward Bliss Reed, of Yale University, and Mrs. Reed presented their daughter, Mary Bliss Reed, to society at a dance.

Mrs. Reed is a daughter of Mrs. William Reed Thompson, of Northumberland street. And Mary Thaw Dilworth, daughter of the John Crossan Dilworths, was at her cousin's debut party.

Mary Dilworth and Mary Reed, both granddaughters of Mrs. Thompson, nee Mary Thaw, will be presented to Pittsburgh Society at a tea December 22 in the Pittsburgh Golf Club.

To Make Bow Here

Before the dance last night, Mary Reed's parents gave a dinner for her in the club for members of her house party, including our Pittsburgh deb, Mary Dilworth.

At the ball, Mary Reed received in a frock of white crepe before a bower of autumn flowers and foliage.

This afternoon Mary Reed and her house guests will attend the Yale-Chicago football game. She is a sophomore, by the way, at Vassar. Before going to college, she was graduated from Dobbs Ferry.

Those who have made reservations for luncheon at the Hotel Schenley after the marionette show this morning include Mrs. Samuel Hamilton, who will have six guests; Mrs. John McCook, who'll have five; Mrs. W. F. McKinney, 10, and others who will have smaller tables will be Mrs. Louis Hays, Mrs. Sidney Binns, Mrs. S. E. Bradenbaugh, Mrs. William Gibson, Mrs. Ralph A. Smith, Mrs. Harry Aronson, Mrs. A. J. Sunstein, Mrs. I. W. Frenk and Mrs. W. H. Schoen.

Luncheon Hostesses

There will be a demonstration of the marionettes at the luncheon, too, to show the children how they are manipulated.

Pittsburghers Active at Resort

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Oct. 8.—The fashionable Pittsburgh colony at the Homestead for the fall divided interest during an active week between the gay round of social functions that are of particular importance at this time of the year, the imminent and annually-popular fall golf tournaments and the colorful spectacle of the twentieth annual fall tennis tournament which attracted hundreds to the Casino lawn during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Harden Church joined the colony this week from Pittsburgh. They were accompanied by Mrs. James Francis Burke. The party was among those in the tennis galleries.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew M. Moreland, who came with Mrs. George Hamilton Flinn, were among others from Pittsburgh who joined the Homestead colony during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. McClintic, who came from Pittsburgh late last week, were among those giving dinner parties. They entertained in honor of Mrs. Daniel Karsner, of Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Mossman were among others from Pittsburg who arrived at the Homestead during the week.

Many teas were given on the Casino lawn during tennis week and those who entertained include World Court Justice and Mrs. Frank Billings Kellogg, Sir Henry Thornton and Lady Thornton, Mr. and Mrs. Fay Ingalls, Mrs. Ingalls Sard, Mrs. Edward E. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Langenberg, Mrs. Daniel H. Holmes and many others.

4 AT MAYVIEW SUSPENDED

Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the City Welfare Department, today announced the suspension of Walter F. Groves, supervisor of Mayview, and three employes at the city home, pending an investigation into a party held in Groves' home, in North Craig street, during which a holdup occurred. Those suspended with Groves were Stanley Disk, Urban Darr and Andrew Gray.

Richard Disk, another employe at Mayview, who was reported as one of the holdup victims, was not suspended when he satisfied Mrs. Rauh that he had not attended the party.

Mrs. Rauh today said that she and Dr. J. S. Hammers, in charge of Mayview, had held a conference, after which it was decided to suspend those who attended the party until the investigation has been completed.

Mrs. Rauh said:

"So far as we have been able to learn, it was a private party, held for a relative of Mrs. Groves, and those who attended had all been invited. If we find that it affects the department or Mayview in any way we will do something about it."

Pittsburgher Sees Winter Job Crisis

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Unless the present trend is reversed, E. S. McClelland, of Pittsburgh, a member of President Hoover's committee on job sharing, said last night: "We will go into the winter with one worker of every four unemployed."

Addressing industrial leaders attending the seventeenth annual engineering extension conference, he estimated that if the present rate of unemployment increase continues, about 25,000,000 persons will have to be cared for.

WOMEN DON ODD GARBS FOR GOLF

Yesterday was costume golf day at the Edgewood Country Club for the women members. They started out early in the morning and met together for a "White Elephant" luncheon at 1 o'clock. At the luncheon everyone received a prize and extra prizes were given for the funniest costumes.

Mrs. Munson Marshall, chairman of golf at the club, wore a fringed evening gown, much abbreviated as to skirt, and a wide black straw hat. Most of the participants had heavy sweaters over their costumes that proved too flimsy for blustery October winds. Mrs. W. L. Thunhurst's costume was perhaps the most authentic, made of heavy brown and beige checked broadcloth, very sweeping, with a bustle, feather boa and feather muff, finished with a beplumed hat. Miss Dorothy Brinker wore an old-fashioned costume, too, of black taffeta with a large hat, and Mrs. F. M. Sloan was a perky "gob" of which any navy might be proud. Mrs. George K. Warn was a clown, in orange and black sateen, as was Mrs. C. C. Gardner.

Mrs. L. D. Neumann was excruciatingly funny as a bowery "goil" with tight, short skirt, heavy blue wool hose and red plaid scarf.

Mrs. A. J. Yenny was a representative of the short skirt day and Mrs. L. C. Bihler resembled nothing less than an eastern potentate, a rajah perhaps, in blue and yellow sateen trousers and jacket and high algretted turban. And Maggie and Jiggs are mentioned, last but not least. Maggie was Mrs. J. M. Irwin and Jiggs, Mrs. Clark Maxwell.

McKeesport Club Opens Year at Reception

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Mrs. William H. Coleman, president of the McKeesport Woman's Club, was hostess for the opening meeting and reception yesterday afternoon. An address on "Gothic Cathedrals," by Howard McElroy, principal of the George Washington School, was the chief program feature and there was music by two local musicians, Mrs. Janet Sumney McMullen, contralto, and Mrs. J. Denny O'Neil, Jr., who accompanied her.

Presidents and representatives from visiting clubs were called upon to speak. During the tea hour Mrs. Coleman and Mrs. J. A. Caughey, the vice president, presided at the table, which was decorated with autumn flowers and candles in matching shades.

The club's regular program meetings will begin October 21.

Reception Held For College Club Head

The decorations and arrangements for the president's reception at the College Club yesterday were entirely different from those for the opening reception two weeks ago. This time the receiving line, which included the president, Mrs. George M. Swan, and the past presidents, stood before the fireplace in the lounge, and the lovely white mantel was banked with ferns. And the guests were served in the tea room instead of downstairs in the dining room as at the former affair.

Mrs. F. F. Rohrer, first vice president, and Miss M. Helen Marks, second vice president, presided at the tea table, where there was a lovely centerpiece of asters and roses in a green crystal vase with green tapers at each end of the table. The other officers served as aides.

Mrs. Swan wore a gown of green velvet and lace with small velvet hat. Next to her stood her predecessor, Mrs. J. Brooks Huff, in tan and brown crepe and velvet; Mrs. Ralph E. Davis was in black and white; Mrs. Stephen L. Goodale wore an orchid knitted suit. Mrs. John E. Nelson was also in black and white—a knitted ensemble—and at the end of the line, Mrs. James M. Graham, Jr., wore black and white figured chiffon with touches of orange at the sleeve edges.

Dorrington, baritone, with Miss Grace E. McMillan at the piano, will sing.

TWO COLOR COMBINATIONS IN LESS OBVIOUS ALLIANCES SMART

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—Two-color combinations are still important Paris fashions, but they are not the obvious alliances they were a few months ago. The old familiar methods of putting black on white or navy, the mixtures of beige and brown, the combinations of red and black that we've become accustomed to—all these have grown so popular that their fashion value has gradually diminished.

* * *

THE NEW and successful color combinations are those which do one of two things—either the way in which the colors are combined is unusual, or else the combination of the colors themselves is unexpected and unfamiliar.

* * *

TWO AUTUMN costumes—one a coat and the other a coat-dress, both chosen from the Maggy-Rouff collection designed by Maggy Bescancon de Wagner—show how these two color plans are worked out.

* * *

THE COAT-DRESS, looking indeed very much like a topcoat, is made of a new black woolen which has a red thread ingeniously inserted into its weave here and there in such a way as to effect a plaided design only upon the closest observation. At a distance the dress looks black—but a very unusual black which borders on dark gray. There is no other bit of color in the entire costume; there is no colored scarf at the crenelated collar and the hook fasteners are all black.

* * *

PUTTY COLORED woolen—a color just off beige and not quite gray, fashions the fitted coat at the right. It is simply designed: it is not until the scarf, which begins at the two buttons at the front of the shoulders, then crosses back of the neck—it is not until it ties in a scarf at the front that a brown silk lining is visible. The suede belt is of matching brown.

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Some Fellows Are Lucky If They Have No Money

Would you ditch the boy friend if he got down on his luck?

That's what Hal's sweetie did.

All was rosy so long as he had a good job, and could take her to nifty shows and plenty of dances; but when the job took wings, she couldn't see him.

"Get out!" she cried, "and do not come back until you can say it with orchids!"

And Hal wanted to know what we thought of her. Were all gals like that—or had it been his bankroll she was thinking of when she said "yes"?

"I say it was!" snorts X. Y. Z. "And here's one girl who didn't duck out when bad luck knocked on the door!"

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I'm a stranger at this kind of letter writing, and also a stranger to your column, but the reason for this sudden outburst is Hal's letter about his so-called sweetie.

"I'd like to give an opinion of her from the feminine viewpoint, being a girl myself. My idea may sound like a lot of hooey or applesauce, to some people, but my idea is that Hal was sidetracked in the nick of time, and he should thank his lucky stars that he did lose his job before he got permanently hooked by this girl.

"I had a similar experience, and I feel that if he can see the right side of this thing, and see that girl as she really is, he will feel better about what happened.

SALARIES REDUCED

"About a year and a half ago I met a young man who at that time was working quite steady, and getting pretty good pay. After we went together for a short time we became engaged. About that time he had to take a big cut in his pay, due to the fact that he was put on part-time work. The reduction was so noticeable that by the time he paid for his board and room, he had just about enough left for carfare.

"Well, this did call for some quick thinking, but it never occurred to me to show him the door on account of it. I loved him. There was just one thing to do, and that was to find some kind of pleasure and entertainment that didn't call for a bankroll.

"And I guess we must have succeeded all right, for we're married now, and have been for a year.

"I still have my job, with a big c-u-t, to correspond with conditions, and he still has his, which isn't what it should be any more, by any means. But we're still going, and so far as I'm concerned, we'll keep on going for quite some time.

OFFERS ADVICE

"We're living with his folks at the present time, and run the house on what we get, and unless I am very weak minded or wrong, as a lot of people thought I was when I leaped into this, I would not trade him for anything in the world—and I'm sticking, what I mean.

"This so-called speech of mine may not hit the mark, but when I think of people—I mean girls, such as she—it makes me dizzy, because what's the use of playing if you can't play fairly?"

"So my advice to Hal is just this: Chalk that up as just another experience, and get out into the field again and pick yourself a flower worthy of your time and admiration and love. Don't let it make you think that all girls are like that, because they are not. X. Y. Z."

That's a great letter, kid! You're regular, and then some! And here's my hand to you for your love and grit!

It's spunk and fineness like yours that'll pull these United States out into the sunshine again!

'AND THEY READ NO MORE THAT DAY' -:- -:-

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

To Eros, young and ancient son of the Lady who was the original bathing beauty of the world (original, too, in that she wore no suit at all, and came from the sea before she ever went into it!), this sentence is a whole Love Story—begun, told and finished. The whole story is there. For, any soul who has ever been in love or even thought about being, with any imagination at all, can put a chin in a dreaming fist, and see the entire play: moonlight, garden, sunshine, roses, long talks about very little, cheek to cheek and lip to lip, ardent words, vows and starry pictures drawn by one lover's hand for the other.

For Love, the pudgy bodied, but faery-minded, the whole library is one tiny red book, red for ardour, no bigger than a thumb-nail, titled "A Love Story;" and inside is one page upon which is written one sentence, this, from the sad story of poor Paola and Francesca, "— And they read no more that day!"

How much WE write about love!—and how long we take, millions of words and volumes long to do it, when it can all be set down and told, with every bejewelment of love, in that one little line!

NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Informal Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to have a little party in a few weeks and I am uncertain about a few things:

1—I plan to invite three young men whom I have met and seen three or four times, but I do not know how to go about writing the invitation. Could you help me by illustrating one?

2—Would it be correct to use correspondence cards on which to write this friendly message?

3—Would it be proper to enclose my address and telephone number so they can respond?

4—As we have no guest closet, would it be correct to take the young men's coats, or allow them to place their wraps upon my bed in the bedroom, which is just off the hall?

5—Just how and when should I introduce my mother?

6—Are the gentlemen introduced to the ladies, or the ladies to the men?

7—There are a few in the crowd who do not know how to play bridge, so would you please suggest some games for people between the ages of 19 and 21 to play?

1—The invitation might read something like this:

Dear Mr. Thompson:

I am inviting some friends for a small informal party at my home on Friday, the first of October, at eight o'clock, and it would give me great pleasure if you will come. Will you? My address is on the top of this sheet, and my telephone number is: ————.

Mother and I are looking forward to welcoming you to our home, and I hope that you will find it possible to be with us.

Friendliest greetings from us both.

Cordially,

2—Far better than correspondence cards (which so often give a cramped appearance, especially to an invitation) is a double-sheeted piece of regular letter paper (the paper on which you wrote to me would be quite all right), or the small half-sheet called the semi-note.

3—Yes, I have indicated this in the note I drafted.

4—Don't take the young men's wraps. Instead tell them where they are to "rest" their hats and coats.

5—Your mother will, of course, be in the living-room with you as your guests arrive, and as they greet you, you present them to your mother, if she does not already know them.

Like this: "Mother, may I present Mr. Graham," or "Mother, this is Mr. Graham," or "Mother, this is Mr. Charles Graham."

6—The men are introduced to the women: "Miss Andrews, may I present Mr. Watress," or "Miss Andrews, Mr. Watress."

7—What about backgammon? This is now usually the choice when bridge is not played.

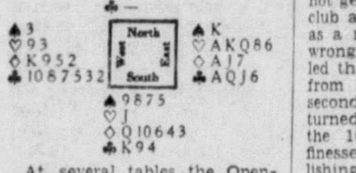
Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Swings of Freakish Distribution

Hands of freakish distribution furnish much food for comment in master Duplicate play because of the varying results which come from the different methods in which these holdings are handled by different players. Probably the hand that caused the most heartbreaking and variety in bidding at the Masters' Gold Cup event in the recent American Bridge League Tournament at Asbury Park was the following:

North—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



At several tables the Opening bid was four spades, and at one table East doubled that contract. North was permitted to play it, and made not only his contract but an overtrick as well for a top-score on the board. At other tables players opened also with four spades, but were overcalled, and either were defeated in six spades or else accepted a minor penalty for defeating an adverse contract.

The best result, East and West, was obtained by Mr. Waldemar von Zedtwitz, who played the hand in five clubs, which he made. North opened the spade Ace and then switched to a heart. Dummy won, South dropped the Knave, and Mr. von Zedtwitz, one of the greatest analysts of the game, correctly interpreted North's lead and played the 9, thereby getting a finessing position in hearts. He deduced that North's only reason for leading a heart would be North's hope that his partner might be able to ruff the suit.

To justify this hope North must have held five hearts originally, and Mr. von Zedtwitz could see that he needed two discards to make his contract if the King of clubs should not drop, as West could not get in his hand for both the club and diamond finesses, and, as a matter of fact, both were wrong. Mr. von Zedtwitz then led the Ace and Queen of clubs from Dummy. South won the second round of clubs and returned a club. West won with the 10, led the heart 3 and finessed the 8, thereby establishing two hearts in Dummy for discards in his own hand.

At the table where North played the hand at four spades, doubled, and made an extra trick, East opened the heart King and led another round of hearts with the deliberate intention of permitting the Declarer to get in the South hand so that he might have the opportunity to finesse the trump. North, however, had a different and winning line of play. He returned to his own hand by ruffling clubs and continued to ruff all of his losing hearts, thereby losing only one diamond and one heart.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S QUESTION:

Should a Raise be given immediately on a hand containing only 1 honor-trick and support for partner's suit, partner having opened with a two-bid?

Answer: Yes. Partner has no right to expect any stronger holding.

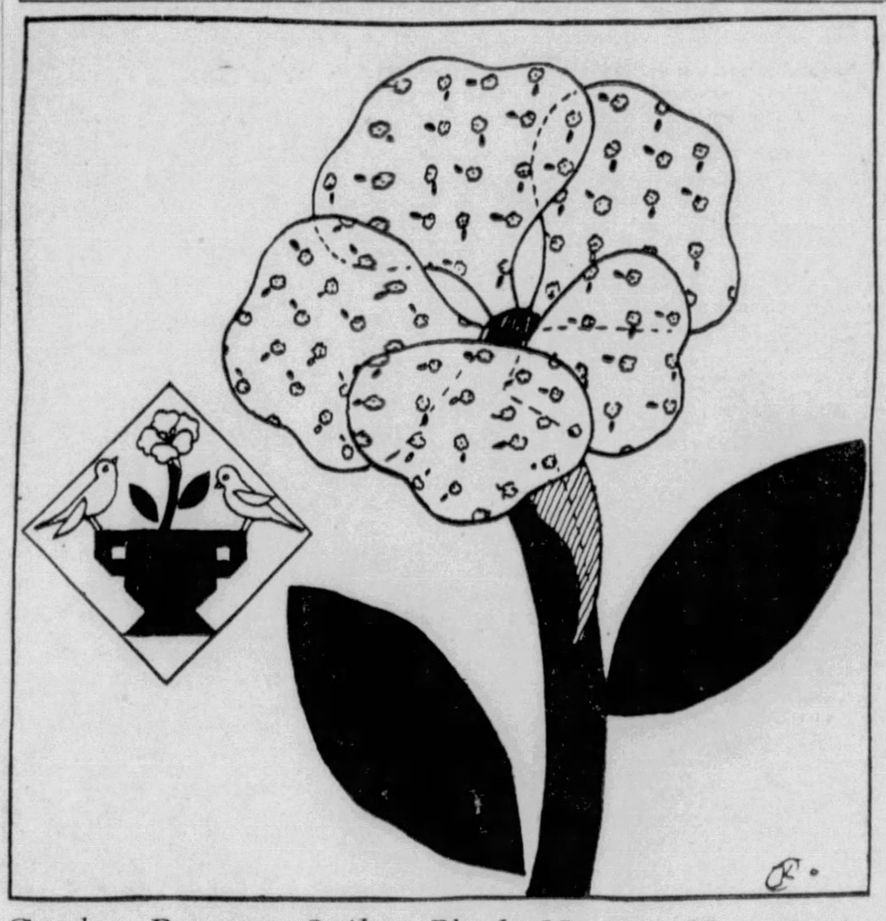
Nancy Page Quilt Club -:- -:- By Florence La Ganke



Garden Bouquet Quilt -- Block No. 7 -- Nasturtium

A DIRECTION LEAFLET that will aid in making the Garden Bouquet Quilt will be sent free to any reader sending a stamped, addressed envelope to Nancy Page in care of this paper.

Perhaps it was the color of the sunset sky, perhaps it was the coming chill of snow and whiteness, perhaps it was just homesickness for the spicy tang of nasturtiums, but whatever it was, Nancy found herself drawing a nasturtium for the seventh flower block in the garden bouquet quilt.

Her club member loved it. "I'm so glad you planned to make one of those, for I have just a scrap of red and yellow print that I want to use."

Nancy told her to be sure that the scrap was color fast. Cora assured her it was for she had used some of it for beach pyjamas last summer, and land knows they had had plenty of sun and water.

The long point of the flower had best be made of yellow material. Of course, the leaves and stem are green. And the stem is made from bias tape. The members had made the lower half of the diamond block when they pieced the urn. They had seamed this to the upper white triangle cut 17½ by 12½ by 12½.

They had made the two birds which perch on either side of the flower. Sometimes the members had difficulty getting the flower and the birds on the block. In some blocks Nancy suggests that the stem be lengthened slightly. This brings the flower head up farther in the triangle point and gets it out of the way of the birds. She told the members to use their own judgment.

The first thing the members did when they received this pattern was to cut it, with its accompanying directions, from the paper.

Then they traced the flower lightly on the upper triangle of white. This gave them an outline to follow when they were appliqueing the flower later.

Next they made another tracing of the design onto a piece of light weight cardboard. This they cut into its separate pieces so they had patterns to use for cutting.

The original pattern was now put for safe keeping in the Nancy Page quilt scrap book.

Laying the cardboard patterns onto the cloth, the pieces were cut, making a quarter-inch allowance on all sides for turning under raw edges. These were basted and pressed.

Then the pieces were pinned and basted in place and appliqued.

BACK BLOCKS SUPPLIED

In the event you have missed any of the Garden Bouquet Quilt blocks previously published in this paper please send ten cents for each block missing. Also enclose stamped, addressed envelope. Address Nancy Page, care of this paper.

Nancy advised the use of the slanting, invisible hemming stitch. Had any member wanted to buttonhole the edges she would have cut all the pieces the exact size as given. No raw edges are turned under when pieces are buttonholed.

Nancy might have colored the space within the traced outlines on the white triangle with colored crayon, pressing the color in by using a hot iron after the crayon has been laid on. Or, she might have made the flower in outline stitch.

The dark spot in the center is made with satin embroidery stitch, using fast color embroidery cotton.

The dotted lines in some of the petals indicate the overlapping of one petal over another. The petals are cut on dotted lines and covered by upper petals.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Diabetes One of Great Public Health Problems

Although tremendous strides have been made in the treatment of diabetes, the disease still continues to be a great public health problem. It is a menace that must not be overlooked.

Dr. Copeland

Unfortunately, most persons suffering from diabetes are unaware of the ailment until it has been present for some time. Neglected cases do great damage to the body and are more difficult to control.

Too many persons, I fear, do not take diabetes a serious disease. They have come to believe that it is easily cured by taking insulin, but unfortunately this is not the case.

Do not misunderstand me. Insulin has proved to be a remarkable discovery. It is of tremendous value in the control of diabetes, but it does not cure it. In fact, we have no medicine that can cure.

Diabetes is a disease in which there is too much sugar in the blood and urine. By means of a carefully prescribed diet and, in selected cases, the use of insulin, the disease can be controlled. From the standpoint of control, such great progress has been made that it has enabled many individuals to continue with their daily work and to live the expected span of years.

Prior to the discovery of insulin, persons suffering from diabetes were considered as doomed to die within a short time; but today it is a menace to health and life only when it is neglected. Unfortunately, unnecessary complications of diabetes occur in many cases because the persons affected fail to take advantage of modern medical treatment. May I impress upon you the danger of self-medication in diabetes?

The disease must be considered as a public health problem, and we must not be satisfied until statistics show a decline in the number of sufferers from this disturbance. For many years it has been known that those who are overweight are more inclined toward this ailment than thin persons. I warn you that overweight is a danger sign. It should be looked upon as a warning of the possibility of acquiring diabetes.

Further, let me stress the importance and value of periodic health examinations. A stitch in time may save nine. My advice is for every person to have a complete overhauling by a physician and an urinalysis every six months.

Persons who are overweight and show occasional traces of sugar in the urine should have restrictions placed upon the diet. They will benefit greatly when they avoid milk, sugar, bread, pastries and other starchy foods. When diet alone is not sufficient, insulin must be given, but it should never be given except under the supervision and advice of a physician.

Dad and the Children

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Many fathers aren't as interested in their children as they should be for the simple reason that they don't know their children, and in many cases the mothers are partly responsible. Some are jealous of the child's interest in dad, while others, if only passively jealous, use dad as a sort of "bogey man" who will mete out dire punishment when he gets home.

Small wonder that the bond between hosts of fathers and children is slender and precarious!

It is also unjust, for beneath nearly every man's indifferent, hard-boiled exterior there is a soft, yearning paternal spot that hungers for recognition, just as woman's maternal inclinations need outlet.

Then why not share the kids with Dad? If Sonny asks you a question pertaining to business, banking, Latin or who hires the man to pave the street out front, why not ask him to talk it over with Dad when he gets home? Turn over to Dad and the youngsters every bond of interest that you can. Leave all questions with which your husband is familiar for him to answer. It won't lessen your child's respect for you if you admit that Dad knows more about some things than you do. We can't all know everything, and a child isn't slow to realize this.

Give your children time alone with Dad. Encourage them to go on hikes or short excursions with him. Dad will get much closer to their inmost thoughts in a few hours alone with them than in days with you around.

Let Dad read the bedtime story once in a while and put his son or daughter to bed. Hearing a small child say his prayers most certainly softens and awes anyone, and it may mean more to your husband than you can imagine when he tackles tomorrow's problems. Share the children with Dad. He needs them and they need him.

Household Hints

If evaporated milk is boiled in the can, cooled and then whipped it will serve admirably as whipped cream.

A small bottle should be kept in the machine drawer to hold broken needles. Too frequently we are careless with these broke bits, or else we mix blunted needles with our good ones and cause trouble later on.

A FIGHT THE ROMANS NEVER THOUGHT OF—

A Black Leopard pitted against A Shark!

THE excitement-loving Roman Emperors staged many stirring spectacles in the gaudy days of the Coliseum, but their best efforts never equalled that fight accidentally provided by Nature when a black leopard leaped overboard from a ship and battled for his life with a 14-foot shark! Frank Buck describes it in his new series of stories about experiences in bringing back live animals for American zoos!

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

A. M. Stroll

A silver shadow falls along Broadway;
The endless cross-streets swing from river to river
Like gleaming bridges, but the Indian Giver
Lends this beauty only to take away.
The same moon here is colder than at home
And higher, too; above the infinite towers
Even the wind comes down in frosted showers.
(Central Park is a crystal monochrome . . .)

Do you see that last? Observe how far I've sunk
Since you took back your love; all I have left
To do is play with words. Your charming theft
Makes living incoherent, rather—drunk.
To think that I believed your parting kiss,
To think I think you will believe all this.

—David Vin Steps.

Oop!

George Jean Nathan is reminded of the clunk who once approached Oscar Wilde at a party and said:

"So, you're Oscar Wilde, the man who is never stuck for a witty retort no matter what the subject? I'll wager you 50 guineas I can give you a subject you can't make any nonsense about!"

Oscar covered the bet, and then said:

"Very well. What's the subject?"

"The Queen!" replied the fellow seriously.

"The Queen," quipped Wilde, "is no subject!"

Jim-Jam-Gem

"I see that Jimmy Walker's Duesenberg is for sale," writes Izzy Elinson. "I'd like to buy the car, but I'm afraid every time I got into it, it would head straight for the Central Park Casino!"

The Pain of It!

J. Anthony Hughes says that the idea-lifters are getting away with murder more than ever. And that Keating, the magician, saw a new show at the Belmont Theater recently in which a young man lifted nearly every trick Keating uses.

After watching several of his stunts from an aisle pew, Keating was amazed when the echo came down the aisle and asked Keating to examine some steel rings.

"Good heavens!" yelled Keating, "do I have to stooge for him, too?"

Why Actors Die Young

It actually happened in one of the casting agencies yesterday. Jerry Goff, who has been looking for a role for months, was handed a part to read by a caster, who wanted to try him out.

Jerry read it, only to be comforted with:

"Say, You read that better than the guy who's gonna play it!"

Cubs Is Right!

"Banjo" Santly, a rabid Yankee rooter, has no heart. Even after the Cubs had dropped four straight games, he telegraphed Manager Grimm the following:

"What was the final score between the Yankees and P. S. 70?"

As If We Didn't Know

"It takes only five minutes to walk over to Park avenue," says William J. O'Donnell, "but it takes five million to stay there."

The Morning Mail

"Dear Walter," affectionately writes Texas Guinan, "glad you are well again. Here's an item that is very funny. A woman named Mrs. William Butters gave birth to a child in lobby here in Minneapolis. Then she came in to see rest of the show! They made me godmother. I named it Texas Winchell Butters. With those two names it'll either be a genius or an idiot. Here are some gags. A Chicago gangster was bumped off and left a wife and four policemen without any means of support! . . . A husband is a sweetheart with the nerve taken out . . . Love makes the world go round, but a sock in the jaw does the same thing.—Love, Tex."

"P. S.—You're a pain in the neck!"

Thanks for moving me up!

Flipcracks

In the Bill Morrow manner: Sappy days are here again. Customers are flocking to the brokerage houses and the brokers are flocking to the night clubs with the loot! . . . Anyhow, as long as the stocks continue to jump, the brokers won't have to! . . . If you still have one, the emaciated wolf-at-the-door will make a dandy doormat for slushy weather . . . It is barely possible that the "forgotten woman" is last year's beauty contest winner . . .

Nowadays, when a movie doorman shouts: "Plenty of seats inside!" it's a safe bet they're not occupied.

Incidentally

One who signs his note "Admirer" reports that we were on the pan again last night at one of the Central Park zoos. And that it was related that another book is due in the winter, which will set forth that we swiped "Go-Ghetto" from an obscure column in the Evening Post. That "whoopee" appeared in an Austin (Tex.) column six months before we became a columnist.

Then to make us laugh louder a Hollywood friend forwards a copy of the October 1 Filmograph, which tells of Jean Malin's divorce. It winds up this way:

"Malin is noted as having been the man who brought fame to Walter Winchell."

Want to Cry? See Norma In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

It is "Sob Week" at the Penn Theater, where Jane Cowl's sweetly romantic "Smilin' Through" is presented with Norma Shearer in the double role of the murdered bride and the young girl who falls in love with the murderer's son. It's a pretty story with angels' wings beating against the bars of death and love victorious over the grave. The Hollywood reincarnationists have shuffled the years and the wars, they have put in a big church wedding with an army of guests, they have brought the fashions and the slang up-to-date, but the heart-throbs are still there and the tear-ducts all open.

Mr. Seibel

Norma Shearer, in the Jane Cowl role, is lovely to look upon and convincing in her tenderness. Leslie Howard as the senior hero is effective in the romantic scenes, but unfortunately he is like that famous lady whom age could not wither, so that his demise leaves us sorrowing that he should die so young. Frederick March as the junior hero plays with engaging verity even when he has to exhibit superhuman nobility. And O. P. Heggie does a right neat bit of character comedy.

But who cares about the acting, who cares about the rare old garden or the magnificent cathedral, who cares about the peanut-brittle in the dialogue? There are yards and yards of Norma Shearer's clinging kisses, and we know that such love will come "smilin' through" after all is said and done. You come to sniff, and you stay to sniffle.

There is also a short comedy in which asparagus performs serpentine antics, and a Krazy Kat cartoon in which Hollywood stars are cleverly lampooned. By this time your hanky is dry and you are ready to depart for home.

Cohan Is Star In Warner

By WILLIAM PEARR

"The Phantom President," in the Warner, is a better than average bit of entertainment. In one hour there are two laughs which shake the theater, a dozen smiles and perhaps a dozen less entertaining moments. Time being so plentiful these days, this looks like a good investment.

Those of us who think that George M. Cohan is the best showman in the business and that Jimmy Durante is the nuttiest of the nut comedians probably will be disappointed. But those who take the picture in their movie-going stride should be pleased.

Durante's performance is at least as good as any he has given in the pictures. Certainly he has more to do here.

This is Cohan's debut in the talkies, and possibly his farewell. And it looks as if Hollywood hasn't done right by our George. He doesn't click in this picture, and this reporter isn't discerning enough to determine whether it's his part or the direction that's responsible—perhaps both.

Cohan is a medicine show man and Durante is his stooge. Because he resembles a colorless presidential candidate, Cohan is substituted to put a punch in the campaign. He winds up in Washington with the beautiful Claudette Colbert on his arm. But the inauguration, almost ruined when Cohan ventures to announce he has lost his morale, is saved when the Schnozzler come to the rescue with:

"You go 'head, Chief, I'll look for it."

Roosevelt, Al On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Pictures of the New York Democratic state convention in Albany, with Al Smith shaking hands with Gov. Roosevelt, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. President Hoover is seen and heard delivering his opening campaign speech at the Coliseum in Des Moines, where he outlined his farm program and defended his policy and the acts of the administration.

One of the most thrilling automobile crashes ever filmed comes from the Brooklands track in England. Clive Dunfee, driving his car two miles a minute, loses control on a high-banked turn and the car hits a tree. Dunfee's bride of two years witnessed his death.

From Basel, Switzerland, are pictures of the balloon race for the James Gordon Bennett trophy which was won by one of America's two entries, the other entry capturing the second prize.

The Mayoralty Batting Order For New York

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

New York needs laws prohibiting parking of mayoralty candidates within eight feet of fire plugs.

Here's the way the batting order now stands:

McKee: Only Mayor of New York City elected for the duration of Indian summer.

O'Brien: He finally got into the parlor.

Walker: Taking ocean rides on what seems to be a 60-trip commutation ticket.

Harvey: May get the Republican nomination for City Hall. The astronomers won't have to put on smoked glasses for this eclipse.

Whalen: Can swing Park avenue and Riverside drive. Not so important since the silk stocking vote developed runs.

They're all home-town boys. On November 9 they're staging a clambake to compete with the national ox roast.

First mayoralty election in a presidential year for 64 years. And if you have ever seen a performance in town hall you know that local talent takes itself seriously.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

MEXICO CITY, Mex., Oct. 8.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Well, here is Mexico, my pet foreign country. They just had a change of Presidents here, not a shot fired, not a speech made, not even a radio address. Country not all divided against itself. I tell you this is the most civilized country in the world. Our Ambassador, Mr. Clark, is just carrying out the Dwight Morrow plans and our relations were never better with Mexico. In fact, Clark was the adviser of Morrow while he was here. Calles is still the strongest man on the Western Continent. Rodriguez, the new President, is very able. If you want to see excitement go to Texas. Half want a man and half want a woman.

BITS OF LIFE — All in a Day — By MARK HELLINGER

The Breaks

WHISTLES SHRIEKED and moaned in the river. The screams of men could be heard. People were running everywhere. A passing reporter saw him kneeling in a corner of the shed. The reporter shook him.

"Ya hurt, mister?" he asked.

The kneeling man turned dazed eyes upward.

"No," he said, "just praying."

It took but one split second to change Bill's outlook on life. . . .

The story goes back 40 years. That's a long time if you're young and a short time if you aren't. That would be 1892, wouldn't it? The Gay Nineties . . .

The ambulance took an awful long time going up Third avenue. The horses were steaming when they stopped in front of the old flat.

The young interne ran upstairs with the black bag. He did all he could for the woman. It wasn't enough. When he left there was the squalling of a new-born babe and the silence of a mother who had done her work and left.

No one could condemn the father for his attitude. He hated that baby. He blamed the infant for causing the death of his wife. They had been happy together. They had a few dollars and a wealth of love. Then the baby had come, and love killed itself.

The little stranger was noisy. He made himself right at home. He cried often. And, when his mother was being carried down those rickety stairs for the last time, he kicked up his legs and cooed.

He was christened William. Then his father had him committed to a nursery. There they called him Bill, and gave him everything but love.

It isn't any wonder that he grew up morose and bitter. The older he got, the more he understood. And the more he understood, the more he hated life.

He was 15 when his father allowed him to come home. The boy's eyes were deep and pale. His frame was tall and thin. He wasn't good looking and he seldom smiled.

Bill's father was harsh. Very harsh. He didn't kiss his son. He didn't even shake hands. He merely introduced the boy to a strange woman. A woman who stared at him without smiling, and who always seemed to be complaining.

"You're a husky lad," said the father. "I took ye out of the home to get ye a job. I've got it all arranged with the ward leader. He'll give ye a crack at the new trolley cars. If ye don't work steady, ye don't eat."

Bill said nothing. He got the job. He worked steadily. And, on Saturday nights he would hand his money over to the woman. Sometimes she gave him a quarter on Sunday. Sometimes . . .

As time went on this boy hated life more and more. Then he met Ethel. A neighborhood kid. It was natural that he should be attracted to Ethel. She was one of the few persons who had ever smiled at him. Then, too, she was lively and affectionate. She had sympathy. So Bill fell in love.

They married soon. They loved each other. That's as good an excuse as any. Bill was happy to break the home ties. He knew that he wasn't wanted there. Besides, he had love . . .

Bill worked as a steam fitter after that. The money was good. The job was secure.

The boy knew happiness then. But he was afraid of it. Afraid that someone would come along and snatch it from him. Afraid that it couldn't last.

Then the baby came. After that he smiled. Not much. Just faintly. And his eyes lit up in their deep wells when he looked at that baby. His baby.

Then came the offer of a new job. They were outfitting an island in the middle of the river. Men were needed. Bill applied for a job. He got it. The salary was more than he had ever got before.

Every morning, he hurried down to the ferry. Every night, he stepped off the boat, weary and grimy.

But that wasn't meant to last. He worked on the job for two weeks. Then the foreman stopped him as he left the ferry one night. He said he was sorry, but Bill would have to be laid off. He had a brother with a wife and baby. That brother needed a job. Bill's job.

Bill stood there staring at the man. He wanted to scream that he had a wife and baby, too. That he needed the job. But he said nothing.

"Come back in three weeks," the foreman said. "I may be able to use you then, Bill."

Bill walked home, weary, grimy and heartsick.

That night he sat in the kitchen with his head in his hands. Ethel stood watching him as she washed the dishes.

"It's the breaks, baby," he kept saying. "The lousy breaks. The world is against me. Doesn't want me. Ever since I was a baby it's been like this. Even God is against me. Why can't He do something for me? He knows the baby must have food. He knows we're up against it. He—"

Ethel tried to console him. It was no use. Bill remained unchanged. Finally, she convinced him that he ought to see the foreman again in the morning. Maybe another job could be found until his old job was vacant.

In the morning, he hurried into his working clothes. He kept telling Ethel that if he didn't get a job he wasn't coming back. She told him that he was crazy. That he should have more patience.

The foreman was standing in the ferry shed, talking to some men. Bill waited for a chance and then approached his old boss.

"Listen," he said quietly. "I just come down here to ask a favor. Last night you said your brother needed my job. He had a wife and baby. Well, I just wanted to say that I've got a wife and baby, too. And no dough. I need the job, Chief. Any job. It doesn't matter. But I gotta—"

The foreman eyed him coldly.

"I told you that you were through, didn't I?" he said. "You're finished. Now beat it. And don't bother me any more."

The man walked on to the boat. So did the other men. Bill stood there watching as the boat started out. He felt dizzy, faint, weak. His brain was thinking strange, crazy things. His hands trembled.

Then it happened. If you read your newspapers, you'll remember. The ferry suddenly split into thousands of flying parts. It sounded like the end of the world. The river opened up and the boat disappeared.

Small black things floated on the water. Men. Whistles shrieked and moaned. Men came running from all over as Bill stood there with his hands covering his eyes . . .

* * *

A passing reporter saw him kneeling in a corner of the shed. The reporter shook him.

"Ya hurt, mister?" he asked.

The kneeling man turned dazed eyes upward.

"No," he said, "just praying."

It took but one second to change Bill's outlook on life.

Crosby, Work Over, Quits Hollywood

Bing Crosby, popular radio star, and his wife, Dixie Lee, have left Hollywood for New York to resume his broadcasting. Crosby recently completed scenes with Stuart Erwin, Leila Hyams, Sharon Lynne, George Barbier, Kate Smith, the Boswell Sisters, the Mills Brothers, Cab Calloway, Burns and Allen, Arthur Tracy, Vincent Lopez and Donald Novis in Paramount's special production, "The Big Broadcast." After that he went for a short swordfishing jaunt in the Pacific Ocean before returning to New York.

ChineseYouth Sought for Big Role

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 8.

Somewhere in the land today an almond-eyed youth approaches an undreamed-of destiny—the chance to play that great emotional role, the lead in "Broken Blossoms."

Secretly, for the talkie rights are not quite clear, R-K-O has launched its daring scheme to feature a young Chinese in the part immortalized by Richard Barthelmess on the silent screen.

Under orders from head-man David Selznick, studio scouts are combing the Chinese colonies of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Later, if the search is fruitless, they will extend their quest to New York and other American centers of oriental life.

Mr. Barthelmess

First requirement, of course, is that the candidate speaks English. Second that he physically resembles the sensitive, poetic hero of Thomas Burke's story, "The Chink and the Child."

Mr. Selznick, they assure me, is not forgetful of the fact that Carl Laemmle, Jr., has tried for months to find an Indian youth to play the lead in "Laughing Boy." He realizes the long chance of entrusting such an important role to a screen newcomer, and to a young man of a different race.

Hollywood is noted for its informality, but Ramon Novarro hit a new peak by attending the opera in a sweat-shirt, covered by an overcoat. He was with two other young men and they may have sat in the balcony. . . . The film colony paid great tribute to Lily Pons in her first appearance here. Many stars had boxes and the audience stared openly at Ruth Chatterton, wearing an old-fashioned orange evening gown with puffed sleeves. She was with George Brent and Helen Hayes. Norma Shearer and Irving Thalberg had another box; also Leslie Howard and Lowell Sherman. Other cinema celebrities in the audience included Jeannette MacDonald and Bob Richie, Mary Carlisle and Jerry Horwin, and Ginger Rogers and Mervyn Leroy.

Lily Pons

Later on, most of the operaites showed up at the Cocoanut Grove where Walt Disney was giving a Mickey Mouse birthday party. Lily Pons got an ovation when she came in and joined the party of Mrs. Edith Hughes.

Miss Pons' manager, Frederick Chang, introduced Hollywood to a new kink in neckwear. His tie was embroidered all over with tiny script: "Repeal the Eighteenth Amendment."

Hollywood's official expert on Indian sign language—of course I mean Col. Tim McCoy—is leaving here with a troupe of 40 to film what he calls the "biggest Indian picture since 'The Covered Wagon.'"

Ed. Robinson In Stanley Is Hit

By EDWARD W. GOSS

Edward G. Robinson has scored another hit in his latest picture, "Tiger Shark," attraction in the Stanley.

Robinson plays an excitable Portuguese captain of a fishing boat. He is boastful, loud, sometimes repulsive but possessed of deep sympathy which makes him thoroughly likable. "Tiger Shark," similar to past Robinson pictures, calls for many emotional scenes. He does these masterfully.

Heading the supporting cast are Richard Arlen and Zita Johann. Arlen is first mate to the fishing boat captain. Miss Johann has the role of the captain's wife. Arlen and Zita Johann are satisfactory, although not exceptional.

The story opens with Robinson and Arlen adrift on the ocean in a dory—a storm has smashed their ship. Before they are picked up Robinson loses a hand to sharks. Equipped with a steel hook to replace the lost hand, Robinson goes about making a big success in the fishing business. He marries, but his wife is in love with his first mate. The captain, after the affair has progressed for some time, finds out and takes revenge.

The picture is made more entertaining by remarkable pictures of tuna fishing.

On the same bill is a short film presenting Phil Cook, "the man with many voices." It shows how he does his radio programs.

PITT, DUKES CLASH TODAY

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Notre Dame Tests Eyed. Dukes Among Exhibits. Leonard Comeback Fails. Purdue's Rare Kickers. Pitching to Swat Kings. Max Knows His Dollars.

EFFECT OF RULES ON IRISH DEBATED

ASIDE FROM THEIR natural interest in the Pitt-Duquesne tussle today as the biggest and hardest test of the Dukes in their march toward major football prominence, district fans were rating the tilt as important from another angle. They expected that the showing of the Layden-coached Dukes, with their Rockne style of play, would with some other games in various sections this afternoon, shed some light on the question now being debated throughout the country as to whether or not the Notre Dame system has been affected to a greater extent than others by the new rules.

Elmer Layden

Those who contended at the start that the altered code would reduce Irish effectiveness point to some of last Saturday's results in support of their arguments. Yale, with Adam Walsh and Buck O'Connor on the coaching staff, was held scoreless by little Bates, Navy, drilled by Rip Miller, Christy Flanagan and One-Play O'Brien, lost to William and Mary. Michigan State, Villanova, Georgia, Missouri and North Carolina — coached respectively by Jimmy Crowley, Harry Stuhldreher, Harry Mehre, Frank Carideo, and Charley Collins—all bit the dust.

BUT THE OTHER side of the book has not been mentioned. How about the victories of Purdue, Georgetown, Alabama, St. Mary's, Rice, North Carolina State, Washington, Detroit, Duquesne and others? These would appear to indicate that many Irish coaches have found the rules no handicap.

Today's games ought to furnish a further line on the question, particularly with the real Notre Dame team itself playing its first engagement. Meanwhile most fans are inclined to believe that as the season goes on, the Irish system will be found to include among its many strong points a resourcefulness that will enable it to adapt itself successfully to any new conditions.

THEY MAY COME back part of the way in the fight game, but there's a limit to the distance they can travel over the return trail. Benny Leonard looked great against minor foemen, only to fail in his main objective and the real test last night, when Jimmy McLarnin stopped him in the sixth round.

The original Leonard met the same fate as the "second Leonards"—Sid Terris, Ruby Goldstein and Al Singer—whom the same McLarnin had flattened. The burden of 36 years was a handicap in itself, but the real barrier to success against his first top-notch foe was an absence of seven years from the game. No mechanic can stay away from his trade that long and still be good at it, not even with the science and clean living of a Leonard. Rust saps the old stamnia, resistance and punching power. It just can't be done. It's the Jim Jeffries story repeated.

PURDUE MAY SHOW them all something in two-style kicking this season. The Boilermakers have a rare pair of adepts in Paul Pardonner, drop-kicking quarterback, and Paul Moss, great end and punter. As a sophomore last season, Pardonner made 11 out of 12 dropkicks good for point after touchdown, and in the opening game against Kansas State this year his two attempts split the uprights, giving him a record of 13 successes in 14 consecutive tries. In the Kansas State game Moss gave one of the greatest exhibitions of sharpshooting punting ever seen in the Middle West. He punted four times during his stay in action. The first kick went out of bounds at the Wildcat one-yard line, the second at the six-yard mark, the third at the four-yard line, and the fourth at the six-yard line. That's placing them where you want them.

Jim Bottomley

IN THE MATTER of having a perfect .300 batting record for a major league career, no player ever missed out by a narrower margin than Jim Bottomley, of the Cardinals. There have been only two breaks in Jim's string, and each time by just a single point.

For four straight years after coming up in 1922, Bottomley hit steadily over .300. Then in 1926 he slipped to .299. Making a fresh start in 1927, Jim finished in the select circle annually for five more seasons in a row, only to be stopped at .299 again this season.

THEY'RE STILL PANNING the Cub hurlers for the way they pitched to Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth in the world series. One National League star terms the Cub pitching the most stupid he ever saw. This player says the Chicago hurlers should have known that nobody can throw the ball past the famous sluggers, and that they ought to have given the pair lollypop stuff. He argues that the proper method would have been merely to push the ball up there, and keep it inside or outside, or make Lou and Babe reach for it.

OTHER BASEBALL MEN assert in reply to this criticism that the Chicago slabmen tried every kind of delivery on Gehrig and Ruth that it is possible to pitch, including the spitball, and that the two big swatters hit everything offered. The Cub hurlers showed them nothing that they had not hit before. Harry Salsinger opines that a perfectly delivered fadeaway might fool them, but there have been no perfectly delivered fadeaways since Christy Mathewson's day. It is held that Charley Grimm's fingers could not have been expected to discover in one series what American League hurlers have failed to discover in years. And anyhow, it is added, great hitters will hit any kind of pitched ball. If there were one kind of ball they could not hit, then they would not be great hitters, because all opposing pitchers would throw that kind of ball to them, or something very similar.

IN WINNING THE little world series against Minneapolis in six games, the Newark Bears bore out to some extent an assertion by Ray Schalk, Buffalo manager, that Al Mamaux's lineup was too good to be coped with by any other minor league club.

Schalk declares that the Newark team, as it finished the International League race, could have beaten out two clubs in the American League and three in the National, and could have made a good showing against the Cubs in the world series.

IT IS NOT because he needs the money that he has come back to the boxing game as a promoter at the Jamaica Arena in New York, Jim Corbett explains, but because he must have something to occupy his time while making a slow return to health after his recent illness.

Max Schmeling

Corbett says he can't go out and troupe any more feeling that he is a bit too nervous to step up to the footlights, so he concluded that the only thing for him to do was to turn to boxing. The former heavyweight champion has engaged as announcer at his club the veteran Joe Humphries, who introduced Corbett to New York fight crowds more than 30 years ago.

MAX SCHMELING knows a thing or two about money matters, besides having a fairly capable man in that line to help him in the person of Joe Jacobs. Max's financial record for his five big fights in this country shows that he has turned his fistic ability to good account. He got $70,000 for drubbing Paulino, $177,000 when he won the title against Sharkey on a foul, $100,000 for defending the crown against Stribling, $275,000 when he lost it to Sharkey, and $55,000 for stopping Walker. That spells $677,000. The German doesn't take any chances in collecting it, either. Though it had been understood he was being paid on a percentage basis, it is now reported that the Walker bout money was in a Berlin bank three weeks before the fight.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 8.—Carnegie Tech's Tartans are ready to go after their second victory of the season when they clash with the Western Reserve Redcats at League Park here today.

The Skibo squad, 30 strong, arrived here this morning after an early-morning start from Pittsburgh, and were kept secluded at a downtown hotel until shortly before game-time.

The kick-off was scheduled for 2:15.

LINEUP SHIFTED

Advisory Coach Wally Steffen arrived from Chicago early this morning, and greeted the squad upon its arrival. He and Head Coach Bob Waddell decided upon the same lineup that faced Geneva last Saturday, with the exception of Bunny Burzio at right guard in place of Clyde Heinzer, and possibly Bevevino at quarterback in place of Renger.

Western Reserve has a far better team than opposed Carnegie here in 1930, when the Pittsburghers ran up a 40-to-8 count without using a regular. Tom Keady is reputed to have constructed a really sturdy eleven, and in some local quarters an upset defeat for the visitors is anticipated.

FINNIGAN STAR

Reserve's attack is built around Eddie Finnigan, star all-around athlete, but the real improvement in the team is said to be in the line.

After several days of rain, the weather cleared yesterday and a fast field was anticipated. Steffen and Waddell indicated that they would stick to the same straight tactics used against Geneva, unless Reserve proved a far tougher nut to crack than is expected.

BENNY STOPPED BY M'LARNIN

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—A pale, blood-flecked, slightly baldish figure, the shadow of one of the greatest lightweights of all time, sagged helplessly into the arms of the referee last night and Benny Leonard was at the end of the comeback trail—the victim of the youthful punching of Jimmy McLarnin.

With only five seconds of the sixth round to go, Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the fight and awarded the verdict to McLarnin on a technical knockout. Leonard, his resistance gone and even his once superb defense no longer effective, was swaying groggily under a hail of blows to the head and body, obviously the target for a knockout blow.

From the moment McLarnin dropped Leonard for a count of nine in the second round, with a right to the jaw, the outcome of this dramatic bout between the old time champion and the impetuous young Irishman never was in doubt. Leonard gave a masterful exhibition of boxing at the outset, winning the first round amid a tumult of applause from the packed arena.

The crowd, numbering 18,000 cash customers who contributed to a gate of $60,000, viewed the contest with mingled emotions. Leonard received a terrific ovation when he entered the ring, drawn and somewhat pale. His early efforts received thunderous applause as he repeatedly made McLarnin miss like a school boy, but as quickly as it became apparent Benny was just a shadow of his old self, without anything like a dangerous punch, the gallerytes underwent a sudden change in sentiment.

Leonard tried one of his old-time tricks, talking to Jimmy as he sought to get out of a tight corner early in the sixth. McLarnin lashed out with both fists and connected. Leonard wobbled and was saved by the ropes from going down. Bracing himself he stopped around, shielding his head with his arms. Bent half-over, Leonard was out on his feet. He didn't seem to realize what was happening when the referee stepped in.

Ted Yarosz, of Pittsburgh, and Eddie (Kid) Wolfe, of Memphis, fought a fast draw in a 10-round semi-final following the main bout.

Baby Joe Gans, California Negro welterweight, scored a quick two-round knockout over Eddie Moore, of New England, in an eight-round bout.

(On request, sent with stamped addressed envelope, Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: SIXTY-FOUR YEARS AS A COMMUTER—On August 1, 1932, the hale and hearty Addison Day embarked on his sixty-fourth successive year as a commuter via the Lackawanna Railroad between Chatham, N. J., and New York City. He began commuting long before this form of endeavor became part of the daily life of the suburbanite. In those days he was obliged to make his daily trip by stage to the Oranges, where he boarded a mail train for his destination. The veteran commuter is 82 years old and continues to travel five days a week, at which minimal rate he has made the trip 19,500 times, covering a distance of 936,000 miles, which is about four times the mean distance between the earth and the moon.

TOMORROW: COLUMBUS DID NOT BELIEVE THE WORLD WAS ROUND.

BUCS TO ATTEND MINOR CONFAB

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Paying homage to King Football, who rules in all his glory these days, officials of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club are anxious to stay in the background, yet there are occasional news developments that must be given attention. One of these trickled through to the local office yesterday when Messsers. Benswanger, Gibson and Watters were informed that the annual minor league meeting would be held in Columbus, O., December 7, 8 and 9.

Owing to the easy accessibility of the site of the perennial gathering of the baseball clans, Prexy Benswanger intends to have a full turnout of Pittsburgh officials in attendance. Touching on the meeting, Benswanger said:

EAGER TO DICKER

"We may be able to do some real business at Columbus. In any event, Manager Gibson, Vice President Watters, Coach Hartley and Scouts Hinchman and Molesworth will be asked to be on hand. We fully realize that the Pirates need some strengthening here and there and we will not pass up any opportunity to pick off promising players."

The annual meeting of the National League will be held in New York City shortly after the minor sessions are ended. The pow-wows of the minor magnates always are well attended by major leaguers, and the whole kit then proceeds to the major conventions.

PRICES OUT OF LINE

Only four players advanced to the majors by way of the draft in the selection recently made in New York. The real reason for the small crop may be found in the heavy price which the big league mogul must pay in order to get a boy into the big show. A major owner is forced to put out $7,500 to land an athlete from the Class AA circuits, if the boy is out of Class A, the price tag is $6,000, $5,000 goes to a Class B wheel for a single performer, the respective draft prices in Class C and Class D being $3,500 and $2,500.

Ollie Carnegie and Frank Packard enjoyed big seasons in the International League, but so far they have not been acquired by major league teams. Carnegie was not subject to the draft. Packard stood to advance in this manner had the times been normal, although he, like Carnegie, was playing his first year in the double A class.

Benny Not to Quit Despite Knockout By McLarnin

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion, who was the victim of a technical knockout in the sixth round of his bout with hard punching Jimmy McLarnin in Madison Square Garden last night, said he would not give up his comeback campaign.

The champion, in his dressing room after the fight, was able to sit on the rubbing table and talk to newspapermen and friends. He said:

"It's nice to lose occasionally. All your pals come in to see you. They don't bother when you win.

"I wasn't badly hurt at all. I'm going to keep right on. I was timid. I couldn't get started. I can lick a lot of fellows, maybe even McLarnin, before I'm through."

Featherweight Bout Gets Title Rating

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—The New York State Athletic Commission has designated the 15-round fight between Kid Chocolate, Cuban Negro, who is recognized in some places as junior lightweight champion, and Lew Feldman, of New York, at Madison Square Garden next Thursday as a featherweight championship match.

The winner will be regarded as champion in this state.

Tommy Paul, of Buffalo, who is recognized as champion by the National Boxing Association, was not mentioned at yesterday's meeting.

The commission also approved the Garden's middleweight tournament which opens on the same card with Ber Jeby, of New York, meeting Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland. Frank Battaglia, of Winnipeg, and Chick Devlin, of San Francisco, are the other entries.

COLLEGE GRID CARD HEAVY

Supporting the Pitt-Duquesne clash in the Pitt Stadium, a program of 10 college gridiron games are scheduled for the Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia battlefronts today.

While Pitt and the Dukes engage in their city battle Carnegie Tech invades Cleveland for a meeting with Western Reserve.

The Waynesburg-Penn State duel at State College trails the Pitt and Carnegie clashes in importance. A year ago, Waynesburg sprang a mild surprise by defeating the Lions, 6 to 0. The Jackets, not as strong as they were a year ago, but with triumphs to their credit already over Muskingum and Slippery Rock, hope to repeat today.

Allegheny opens its campaign under its new coach, Waldo Tippin, by engaging Edinboro at Meadville. Grove City, beaten last week by Duquesne, makes its third start of the season with Slippery Rock's Teachers as its opponents. The Grovers are favored to win.

Westminster takes on California State Teachers at New Wilmington, the contest featuring a day of activity in connection with the installation of a new president. Indiana and Clarion meet at Clarion in a fourth Western Pennsylvania clash.

Marshall College takes the field today at Huntington the underdog against tough Western Maryland, coached by Dick Harlow. The Thundering Herd had a tough time last week getting by Morris Harvey and has slight hope of beating the Harlow-trained machine today.

Fairmont Teachers play Cedarville, of Ohio, at Fairmont. West Virginia Wesleyan opens its home season against Bethany, and Morris Harvey steps across the state line to face Bluefield.

St. Vincent, which tied Canisus last Sunday in Buffalo, plays Mt. St. Mary's at Emmitsburg, Md.

PRIMO SCORES K. O.

TAMPA, Fla., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Primo Carnera, Italian heavyweight, knocked out Ted Sandwina, German boxer with a right to the jaw in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round bout here last night. Carnera won every round, pummeling his opponent from rope to rope. Carnera weighed 255 and Sandwina 207.

STARK LEADER AT ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—George Stark, a "dark horse" from Indianapolis, yesterday led the field in the first round of the St. Louis $2,500 open golf tournament, with a 70, one under par.

Stark, who arrived so late he did not have time to change into his golf clothes, jumped from his automobile, rushed onto the course which he had never seen before and in the face of a brisk wind which interfered with the efforts of many of the stars, broke par by a stroke.

The second round of 18 holes will be played today with the 36-hole final for the 64 low scorers and ties carded tomorrow.

Tommy Armour, favorite for the tournament, failed by a stroke to tie Stark. Tommy three-putted the eighteenth green for a 71.

Walter Hagen, after going out in 36, a stroke over par, took a 75.

Jack Keywood, Rushville, Ill., Massey Miller, Indianapolis and Frank Walsh, Chicago, were grouped behind Stark with 71's, while Frank Moore, St. Louis professional was next with 72. Horton Smith, Chicago, shot a 73.

BLUE AND GOLD FAVORED OVER CITY RIVALS

By JESS CARVER

football game. The score—well, let it ride. It doesn't matter. Let it be a secret of the ancients.

Today, with the burden of proof resting on their shoulders, the Dukes, who have been climbing steadily of late years up the ladder of intercollegiate football, hope to prove, by making a good showing against Pitt, that they are deserving of big league rank. The test they are confronted by is an ordeal by fire, for the Night Riders are up against a powerful, oh so powerful, Panther machine.

Comparisons in football, comparisons on the basis of relative scores, usually are odious—not only odious, but generally scarooy. On such a basis, however, Pitt has been installed a prohibitive favorite. Two weeks ago, Duquesne labored mightily to wrest a 3-to-0 triumph from West Virginia. A week ago, in Morgantown, in the Mountaineers' own back yard, the Panthers romped to a 40-0 victory, employing for the greater part of the game and for exactly half the scoring, a mixture of second, third and fourth stringers. The game was a pushover for Pitt.

DUKES' RECORD GOOD

The Dukes, in their rise to what standing they boast, over a period of five years, have beaten such elevens as Wash-Jeff, West Virginia, North Dakota and Haskell, tied Western Maryland, West Virginia, Georgetown and Carnegie Tech and lost by close counts to West Virginia and North Dakota. These were the important major league teams met by the Dukes. These games are the basis of the Dukes' claims for recognition to date.

However, they must click today against Pitt. If they should beat the Panthers, they'll establish themselves once and for all. If they hold Dr. Sutherland's powerful array to a respectable score, anything under 20 points, they will still be worthy of consideration for a page in football's peerage—but let the Panthers trample them under, and it will mean another climb, long and arduous for the Red and Blue. And unless they fight as they have never fought before, and play football such as never has been instilled by a Bluff eleven, they are likely to be brushed aside and driven before a crackling Pitt offensive which will recognize no limits.

Preparations for the contest have been careful on both sides. The Panthers are not taking the game lightly, which is bad for Duquesne. Dr. Sutherland will have his full strength available this afternoon, with the possible exception of his captain, Bulldog Reider, who is nursing a severe and worrisome ankle injury and may decorate the bench, as he did against West Virginia last week. But the rest of the Pitt cast, the lithe, speedy and triply-accomplished Heller, the hammering fullback trio of Weinstock, Weisenbaugh and Luch; the hefty, hard-hitting linemen, Cuba, Hoel, Shotwell, Dailey, Onder and Hartwig, and brusing Bobby Hogan, hard-blocking quarterback and capable punter, are ready to go. Mike Sebastian, who leaves little to be desired as he subs for Reider, will start in the ailing captain's position at right halfback.

PITT LINEUP SET

Pitt's lineup will be identical with that which started against West Virginia. Skladany and Dailey will be at the terminals, Cuba and Hoel at the tackles, Hartwig and Onder at the guards, Shotwell again at center in the place of Tormey, and Hogan, Sebastian, Heller and Weinstock in the backfield.

Coach Layden, of the Dukes, while he has not neglected the offense, has checked and double-checked his defenses. He's made a single shift in his regular starting lineup, replacing Jack Donohoe, veteran tackle star who has a bad leg, at right tackle by big Steve Sinko. Otherwise, the Red and Blue lineup will remain as it started against Westminster and West Virginia, Captain Abele and Krankota are the ends; Niccolai and Sinko the tackles; Weinberg and Decarbo, a good man, the guards; Ciccone the center; Sullivan the quarterback; Delucca or McDonald and Pawlina the halves and Zaninelli the fullback.

Pitt figures to attempt to get by today without showing any more than was necessary to beat Ohio Northern and West Virginia, the two Pitt victims of the present campaign. The Panthers have Army, Ohio State, Notre Dame, Penn, Nebraska, Carnegie Tech and Stanford in the offing and will keep their attack as secretive as possible. The Dukes, with everything to gain and little to lose, must open up, shoot the works, gamble all. There can be no holding back.

CRACK ELEVENS CLASH ON NATION'S GRID CARD TODAY

All America Ratings

By CHRISTY WALSH
Member, All-America Board of Football. (Reg. U. S. Pat. Office.)

Mike Sebastian, of the University of Pittsburgh, was among the 10 players making up the first weekly All-America rating list, announced by the All-America Board of Football during its weekly broadcast over a national radio hookup last night and heard through WJAS in Pittsburgh.

Mike Sebastian

Each player mentioned in these ratings, which will be published every Saturday in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, will receive a Card of Merit, issued by the All-America Board of Football.

The ratings are based on performance in a single game only and the names of new players undoubtedly will appear each week. Players from small colleges have the same chance as those from the larger universities because the weekly ratings are based on information furnished by experienced football writers and observers in all sections of the United States. The listed players for last week's games:

Sebastian—Pittsburgh, Halfback. Harry Keck, of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, says Sebastian has All-America possibilities. Last Saturday, Sebastian, subbing for Capt. Reider, who was injured, ran 56 yards for a touchdown immediately following the kickoff and thereafter the powerful Pitt team breezed through to a 40-to-0 victory against West Virginia.

Miller — Illinois College, Halfback. Miller made sensational 55-yard run under the arc lights in the last two minutes of the game, taking ball on kickoff from his own goal line, and, with the aid of his teammates in several plays, carried it to opponents' 15-yard line. This sensational runback nearly snatched victory from Washington University of St. Louis.

Pricher—Bates, Halfback. This 19-year-old sophomore was the inspiring factor when his small college held the mighty Yale team to a scoreless tie at New Haven. Pricher's 36-yard run was the longest of the day.

McGuire — Wisconsin, Halfback. With a few minutes to play, Decker, Marquette halfback, took a long pass and was within five yards of the goal line when Mickey McGuire, determined and high-stepping little Irishman, downed him from behind after a hair-raising sprint. Final score—Wisconsin 7; Marquette 2, and McGuire had saved the day for the good Dr. Spears.

Le Master—Colorado, End. In a game in which his team was overwhelmed, 54 to 6, by the powerful University of Utah, Le Master was conspicuous in every play. In spite of the powerful Utah rushing, he broke up many an onslaught. On both defensive and offensive, Le Master was the main cog for Colorado College.

Kercheval — Kentucky, Quarterback. Against Sewanee, he carried the ball from punt formation and close order four times out of five. A sensational punter, and considered by Ed Danforth, of the Atlanta Georgian, as the best all-round kicker in football today. Kercheval showed great spirit and ruggedness against a hard-fighting Sewanee team. He called signals with fine judgment and his kicks averaged better than 50 yards.

Stark—Syracuse, Halfback. Put on marvelous demonstration of forward passing against St. Lawrence, netting a total of 218 yards for Syracuse through the air. On top of this, he scored three touchdowns and played a fine defensive game.

Brown—Southern California, Guard. Brown, captain of the national champions, twice smashed through the powerful line of Washington State, blocking kicks that were turned into touchdowns for Howard Jones. Brown showed fine leadership and inspiring individual play.

Cain—Alabama, Fullback. The "Dixie Hurry-Cain," they call him! Zipp Newman, of the Birmingham News, gives Johnny Cain all-America rating for carrying the ball 105 yards in 12 plays against Mississippi State. Cain scored three times and proved himself an ideal captain and an all-America player on the field of battle as well as in moving pictures.

Lund—Minnesota, Halfoack. This young sophomore played sensational football against South Dakota State. He was the outstanding ball carrier and passer of the day. In 26 plays, he carried the ball 109 yards, while his slashing runs, with very little help from his linemen, gave the Gophers their first touchdown—Final score, 12 to 0, Minnesota!

Cardinals Curtail Training Period

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Three weeks will be lopped off the Cardinals' training period next spring, President Sam Breadon, of the club, said today.

Instead of a seven-week warm-up for the National League race, the Redbirds will spend three weeks in Florida and one week en route to the North.

STAGG RETURNS TO YALE AS OPPONENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—With baseball relegated to the stove league for the winter, football takes undisputed possession of the sports page today with a program featured by several games of unusual early season interest.

Notre Dame makes its first start of the year; Northwestern and Michigan, giants of the Big Ten meet in a game which may decide the conference championship; the Georgia Bulldog attacks Tulane at New Orleans and universal attention focuses on the Yale Bowl at New Haven where Chicago meets Yale.

STAGG RETURNS

Better football may be played elsewhere but first place in the heart of the football fan probably will go to the meeting of Blue and Maroon as Amos Alonzo Stagg, for the first time, leads a team back to the school where he starred as a player almost half a century ago.

By Stagg's own admission the 1932 Chicago team is his best of recent years while Yale is intent on erasing the stigma of its 0-0 tie with little Bates last Saturday.

The game in the Yale Bowl tops an eastern program featuring such competition as Columbia-Princeton, New York University-Rutgers, Fordham-Bucknell and Dartmouth-Lafayette. Columbia, N. Y. U., Fordham and Dartmouth have been selected by most observers as probably victors.

The Northwestern-Michigan game, where the result is in the laps of the Gods, tops a Big Ten slate which sends eight of the 10 Conference teams into action against each other. Perdue-Minnesota share mid-West interest, with Purdue given a slight edge over Bernie Bierman's first Gopher team. Indiana-Ohio State and Iowa-Wisconsin complete the Conference schedule.

IRISH OPEN SEASON

Notre Dame figures to romp over the light Haskell Indians, but the season debut of the fighting Irish is always of interest.

Tulane again looks like the class of the Southern Conference, while Georgia, minus Catfish Smith and other stars of the 1931 team appears weaker than usual. Georgia Tech-Kentucky, Auburn-Duke and Florida-Sewanee are other Conference engagements.

Nebraska and Iowa State, champion and runner-up respectively in the Big Six last year, top the schedule for that Conference. Oklahoma plays Kansas, Missouri, 27-to-0 victim of Northwestern, looks to be in for more grief in meeting Texas at Columbia. The Tigers lost last year 31-0.

On the West Coast, Stanford and Southern California meet only minor opponents in Santa Clara and Oregon State, although Santa Clara may give Warner's team a warm afternoon. California may get a drubbing from St. Mary's, the giant killer of the coast. Washington and Oregon should have a warm afternoon at Seattle.

PITT MUST WATCH HIM!

JIM M'DONALD . . . DUKES' FLEETEST HALFBACK, IN ACTION . . . DANGEROUS IN THE OPEN

McDonald was the main scoring threat of Duquesne University as it clashed with Pitt for the first time in football today. He was not in the starting lineup, but was to enter the game at an appropriate time. He is a sophomore. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

WHITNEY ENTRY LAUREL CHOICE

BALTIMORE, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—With the stars of the two-year-old turf division remaining in their stables, 19 juveniles have been named to face starter James Milton in the $10,000 Richard Johnson stakes at Laurel today.

Heading the large field and the probable favorite is Mrs. John Hay Whitney's entry of Crowning Glory and Poppyman. Crowning Glory, a star of the Arlington Park meeting, will have the doubtful honor of carrying the top weight of 125 pounds, while Poppyman, an outstanding mudder, will pack 119.

W. R. Coe also has entered a strong combination in Pomponius and Pompoleon, while C. V. Whitney will depend on the Darb, an erratic but speedy son of St. Germans.

With hopes of breaking its Eastern jinx, the Audley Farm will send out the speedy Hilena, a brilliant filly which burned up the Western tracks. She will carry 122 pounds.

ALEKHINE VICTOR

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Dr. Alexander Alekhine, of France, Capt. J. J. Araiza, Capt. J. Vazquez and M. Acevedo, of Mexico, were victorious in the second round of the international chess masters' tournament, after a session of five hours this morning.

MASSEY, DOWN TWICE, WINS OVER DATTO

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

A left hook to the head twice put Johnny Datto within reach of a knockout victory over Lew Massey, of Philadelphia, in the main bout at the Arena last night. The first floored Massey for a count of two in the opening round and the second for five in the seventh. Each time he got up groggy and fought his way into the clear as Datto vacillated, waiting for a finishing opening.

Aside from these two rounds, Datto didn't win an inning. On the contrary, he was the recipient of a boxing lesson and head and body battering that had him covering and holding. He also finished with a badly cut right eye. The bout was one-sided aside from the knockdowns, which merely emphasized Massey's class in his manner of recovery and alertness in taking the play immediately away from Datto each time.

LEFTS FLOOR MASSEY

It was obvious that Datto caught his man napping in the opening round. Massey was carrying a high guard against a right hand, not knowing that recently the Filipino lightweight has been doing his heavy gunning with his left. By the time the seventh round rolled around, Massey was so far in front and having things so much his own way that he grew careless and was tagged again, putting life back into what had deteriorated into a shambles as a contest. Lew was too fast a boxer and too earnest a hitter with both fists to permit Johnny to keep up with his pace.

It was Massey's second victory over Datto, the first having occurred in Philadelphia in 1929, and his third straight win in bouts here within the past year. He first defeated Tony Herrera at Motor Square Garden and then won over Ray Miller at Greenlee Field.

LYLE BEATS GREEN

It remained for the semi-final to produce one of the toughest slugfests ever seen in any ring. In it, white-haired Ray Lyle, of Akron, carried the fighting to Handsome Anson Green, Homestead Negro middleweight, to win the decision in six rounds of blazing toe-to-toe mixing that had the fans cheering them to the echo at the finish. It was a grueling battle for both, and even for a couple of rounds, after which Lyle moved in front as Green tired and stayed there.

Jerry Clements, Jeannette featherweight, whipped Al Farone, of the West End, in the second bout, and Mickey O'Brien, of Braddock, was the winner over Joey Severino, of the North Side, in a mediocre opener.

The crowd was fair in size. It was announced that Ted Yarosz would box Davy Grove in the main bout next Friday night, with Tiger Walker and Charley Baxter in the semi-final, but the boxing commission has ruled out this match and Yarosz will meet Meyer Lichtenstein, of Rochester, N. Y., instead.

Bush Asks $25,000 To Manage Reds

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Unless he makes a deal to manage the Cincinnati National League club, Donie Bush said today he would return next year to seek another American Association championship for the Minneapolis Millers.

Bush said he was "standing pat" on his proposition to Sidney Weil, president of the Cincinnati Reds, for a three-year contract at $25,000 annually.

Plans for Minneapolis' 1933 team are already being made by Bush, who lost the little world series to Newark of the International League.

DRAKE TROUNCED

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—The Oklahoma Aggies abruptly terminated Drake's four-year supremacy on Missouri Valley gridirons last night by turning back the Bulldogs, 27 to 7. The fast and tricky Cowboys played a consistent game, counting one touchdown in each period.

GENEVA WINS OVER THIEL

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Oct. 8.—Geneva had little trouble tripping Thiel here last night, 33 to 0. The Covenanters used a lineup that included only three players who started a week ago against Carnegie Tech. These lads came through in fine shape, rushing the Lutherans off their feet early in the first period for a touchdown and carrying through despite a stubborn Thiel defense to keep the game well in hand all the way.

Little Joe Troiana, substitute Geneva halfback, led the scoring with a brace of touchdowns, Sauer, Aultman and Heffley tallied the others. The lineup:

Edith Quier Meets Mrs. Vare In Final

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Two former winners of the trophy, Edith Quier, Reading, Pa., and Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, veteran linkswoman, reached the final round of the twentieth annual Berthellyn Cup golf tournament at the Huntington Valley Country Club. They will clash today for the title.

Each of the finalists stroked out two victories yesterday, both the quarter-finals and semi-finals being played due to postponement of competition Thursday because of rain.

Mrs. Vare moved through the semi-final division by a 4-and-3 triumph over Fritzi Stifel, Wheeling, W. Va., after disposing of Mrs. Leo F. Federman, Glen Oaks, N. Y., 4 and 3, in the quarter-finals. Miss Quier achieved a 1 up victory over Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, three-time winner of the cup and former national titleholder, and disposed of Jane Brooks, Nyack, N. Y., defending cupholder, 5 and 4.

KEN HIGH OUT TO BOLSTER GRID LEAD

By JULIUS LEVIN

New Kensington High School, coached by Carl Glock, will be out to strengthen its hold on first place in the AA High School Football Conference today when the valley gridders entertain Wilkinsburg High on the New Kensington field.

New Kensington started its Double A campaign last Saturday with a 7-0 victory over Norwin and another triumph today will give the Glockmen undisputed possession of first place.

Two other Class AA games are on today's schedule. Clairton, winner of the Class A title in 1931, invades Washington, while Turtle Creek Union entertains Norwin.

LOCAL TEAMS PLAY

Two members of the City League go out of town for important scholastic battles. South Hills, local champion in 1931, opposing Martins Ferry at Martins Ferry, O., while Langley is the attraction of Jimmy Russell's Donora eleven.

One of the feature attractions, however, is offered the fans at Greensburg, where Roy McMunn's Hurst High eleven, Class B champion in 1931, opposes Earl Loucks' Greensburg team. The two teams have been rivals for years, and Hurst is expected to make a good showing despite the fact it is a Class A team, while Greensburg is a member of the Conference.

ETNA IN NIGHT GAME

Etna High School, one of the surprise teams in the Class A race this season, ushers in night football at Etna with Apollo High as the attraction.

New Brighton and Ambridge leaders in the race for the Class A title meet in an elimination struggle at Ambridge, while East McKeesport and East Pittsburgh, both battling for the Class I crown, meet in a similar duel at East Pittsburgh.

Swissvale and Munhall, originally scheduled to meet at Munhall yesterday, clash at the Homestead High athletic field. The game was postponed a day to avoid a conflict with the Homestead-Glassport night battle.

Mt. Pleasant plays at Jeannette, McKeesport at Tarentum, Vandergrift at Ford City, Uniontown at Scottdale and Waynesburg at California in other important scholastic tilts.

SCHENLEY WINS

Schenley and Westinghouse turned in victories in City League engagements yesterday while Carrick drew with Allegheny and Taylor Allderdice and South tied.

A touchdown in the first period by Weingarten on a line plunge and one by Cicero, on a smash at guard, gave Schenley a 14-to-0 win over Fifth Avenue. Westinghouse beat Peabody, 12-6. Allderdice had to battle all the way to gain a 7-7 deadlock with South.

Carrick scored in the fourth period to draw with Allegheny. Engel pulling down a pass over the goal line for the touchdown. Mucyk scored for Allegheny in the third quarter, also on a pass.

In other important district games, New Castle ran wild to crush Coraopolis, 55 to 0. Lane, New Castle substitute, scoring four of his team's touchdowns. Charleroi recovered from the defeat at New Castle's hands last week to beat Fayette City, 20-0. Canonsburg recorded an upset by beating Monessen, 7 to 6. Homestead lost to Glassport, 13 to 0, and Edgewood battered the title aspirations of Jack Rosenberg's Rankin eleven, 18-0, at Edgewood.

BRADDOCK VICTOR

Braddock opened its home season with a 59-to-0 win over Pitcairn. Scott beat Midland, 15-0, in a night game at North Braddock, Stanik's 55-yard run for a touchdown in the final period featuring the clash. Duquesne got away to an early lead to beat a game Stowe Township eleven, 13 to 7, and Dormont defeated Ben Avon, 20 to 0.

Oliver and Bellevue inaugurated gridiron relations by battling to a scoreless deadlock at Bellevue, and Crafton defeated Avalon, 25 to 6, at Avalon. Ray Brucher's Leetsdale eleven nosed out Brentwood, 6 to 0.

MASSEY, DOWN TWICE, WINS

REFEREE RED ROBINSON

STOCKS DROP AGAIN UNDER SELLING

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Price movements on the stock exchange flattened out toward the end of the first half hour of trading today after an opening dip which sent some stocks down a point.

Westinghouse Electric and Southern Pacific, after yielding 1 point, recovered about half. Small declines were suffered by American Tobacco B, Standard of New Jersey, Standard of California and Consolidated Oil. In the specialty group United Fruit and American Sugar were somewhat lower. Santa Fe was down a point while Union Pacific was off ½. The steel shares continued steady with United States Steel and Bethlehem fractionally higher for a time. American Telephone and American Can were steady.

The reaction in the market in the previous session, which carried price averages through the resistance levels of mid-September, was viewed in brokerage circles with mixed sentiments. It was pointed out that not quite half of the extreme recovery from the summer lows had been lost.

Corporate news included the denial of the receivership petition filed against the Nickel Plate Railroad in Chicago, which, it was pointed out, would give the management further time to try to get approval of sufficient noteholders to make the refunding plan effective.

The plenitude of short term funds was indicated by the sale of the United States Treasury bills on a discount basis of only .19 of 1 per cent against .23 of 1 per cent for the previous offering. Strength of foreign exchanges, however, was interpreted in some quarters as indicating an end to the recent inflow of gold.

Sterling cables opened at $3.45⅞, up ⅜ of a cent, and French francs at 3.93¾ cents, up ½ point.

CAR LOADINGS GAIN 26,329

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Loading of freight during the week ended October 1 totaled 622,075 cars. This is an increase of 26,329 cars over the preceding week, but 155,637 cars under the corresponding week in 1931, and 349,180 cars less than the same week in 1930, the American Railway Association reports.

The total was the highest for any week so far this year.

Agriculture Credit Loans Available

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Farmers and stockmen are expected by the Reconstruction Corporation to obtain within the next 24 hours their first loans through the new agricultural credit corporations.

The Reconstruction Corporation announced that the capital of the Sioux City, Salt Lake City, Spokane and Columbus (O.) agricultural credit corporations had been made available at the United States Treasury and that these four offices, as well as the Omaha branch of the Sioux City office have started functioning.

A total of $12,000,000 was made available for the four corporations, each being capitalized at $3,000,000.

Chrysler Planning Slash in Capital

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Stockholders of the Chrysler Corporation will vote at a special meeting October 26 on a proposed reduction of the capital to $21,922,215 from $72,965,883, by reducing the amount of capital represented by the 4,380,260 outstanding shares of no par value common stock.

September Well Drillings Fewer

OIL CITY, Pa., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—The Derrick says 1,326 oil wells were completed east of the rockies in September, including 358 dry wells and 71 gassers, and that initial daily production was 187,777 barrels.

During August 1,478 wells were completed with initial production of 215,847 barrels.

New Haven Work Loan Authorized

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has been authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission to borrow $700,000 from the R. F. C. for the purpose of repairing 93 locomotives and 160 freight cars in its own shops.

BANKS REPORT INCREASE IN STRENGTH

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—General business fell so low early in the summer that even the present distinctly unfavorable volume of trade nevertheless makes a favorable comparison.

Roy Chapin, Secretary of Commerce, with the will to be optimistic, estimates that gains from August to September ran 3 per cent to 4 per cent above the normal seasonal change. Yet even so, comparisons with the corresponding period in 1931 still show drastic slumps, and contemporaneous opinion in the autumn of 1931 was that seemingly maximum depression had been attained.

Mr. Rukeyser

The encouraging statistical fact is that for the first time since 1928 seasonal improvement took place as the final third of the year got under way.

In their current statements of condition, the large urban banks report increased strength. Since the mid-June low point, the country's monetary gold stock has been augmented by more than $280,000,000, primarily as a result of gold released from the earmarked accounts of foreign central banks. Furthermore, contrary to the normal seasonal trend, there was a reduction between August 31 and September 28 of $86,000,000 in currency in circulation, as timid funds, which had been hoarded, made a return flow to the banks, helping to swell deposits.

FIND BORROWING

The strengthening financial position encourages the hope that in due course industry will be able to go to the money market for long term funds. In September, new financing was almost exclusively for the government. New capital raised through security issues in the first eight month totaled only $800,000,000; in the same period of 1931, $2,600,000,000 of new capital issues were sold, and in 1930, $5,500,000,000.

The drying up of new capital flotations helps to explain the shrinkage in the gross volume of business. Financial institutions and railroads, which were in need of capital, found it necessary to go into the money market indirectly through the intermediary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, for which the Treasury borrowed funds largely through the sale of short term obligations to banks. Thus, instead of lending directly, the stronger banks supplied funds to the government, and allowed the public agency to assume the risk.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Bank clearings this week are nearly a billion dollars larger than those of the preceding week. The total for leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, was $4,878,840,000. A year ago disturbed financial conditions at important centers occasioned exceptionally heavy exchanges at that time, especially at the larger cities, so that clearings are now 45.0 per cent below those of last year. At New York City, clearings this week amounted to $3,275,261,000 and were 48.3 per cent less than those of a year ago, while for the cities outside of New York, the total was $1,603,579,000, or 36.2 per cent smaller.

The report this week covers the heavy monthly and quarterly settlements due at this time and in part the larger amounts reflect these payments. Boston, Chicago, Detroit and other leading centers, including New York City, show a very marked decline from a year ago. Most of the southern cities continue to make a better showing.

Figures for leading cities as compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., showing decreases as compared with same period a year ago follow:

DENIES NICKEL PLATE RECEIVER

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Petition of a $3,000 bondholder to throw the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad Company, known as the Nickel Plate, into receivership was denied yesterday by Judge James H. Wilkerson in the United States District Court. Judge Wilkerson said:

"There has been no reason advanced so far that this property should be taken over by a receiver."

The court granted the plaintiff right to file an amendment to his original bill within 20 days. John D. Black, attorney for the railroad, said more than 75 per cent of the holders of $20,000,000 bonds of the road have agreed to a refunding plan.

The suit was filed by Samuel Caplan, of Detroit, after the road had defaulted payment on three-year 6 per cent bonds due October 1. Black told the court soundness of the company was attested by loans amounting to $12,600,000 advanced by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation since February.

The Nickel Plate was acquired by the Van Sweringen interests in 1916. It includes the Chesapeake and Ohio, Erie, Pere Marquette, Hocking alley and Missouri Pacific roads.

Ancient Auto Takes Boy West to School

Monaca Home Looted Of Jewelry, Revolver

MONACA, Pa., Oct. 8.—While Mrs. John Huster, of 802 Atlantic avenue, was visiting her mother last night across the street, thieves jimmied the dining room window and ransacked the home. Several pieces of jewelry and a revolver were reported stolen, police said.

Army Fliers 'Chute From Burning Ship

BELLEVILLE, Ill., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Maj. Vernon E. Prichard and Sergt. James E. Clifton saved their lives by making parachute jumps yesterday when an army pursuit plane they were flying caught fire near Scott Field here.

Old Workhorses Save Farmers From Ruin

ATLANTA, Ga.—(INS.)—The lowly workhorse, believed doomed to ultimate extinction by the motor age, has come back into his own.

It is favored today by the farmer to a greater extent even than in earlier years before the tractor came to take its place at the plow and harrow, according to Dr. T. A. Sigler, Greencastle, Ind., a delegate to the annual convention of the American Veterinary Medical Association here recently. He said:

"When the Middle Western farmer was on the verge of ruin two years ago, he was forced to call on his old friend, the horse, to pull him out of bankruptcy, and that is literally what the horse did.

"Horses, particularly work animals, are increasing rapidly. The most recent census showed 14,000,000 horses in America."

BANK DEPOSIT DOWNTREND BROKEN

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—The current crop of condition statements of leading Wall street banks, which have correspondents in every large city of the country, are showing, with scarcely an exception, a gain in deposits.

Not since June 30, 1930, when deposits reached their peak levels in most banks, had the down trend been broken until the present. The statements which are now appearing cover the quarter ended Sept. 30. They show that the banks have further strengthened their liquid condition. Moreover, the gains in deposits have resulted not from an expansion of loans, because there has not been any material change in these, but from what one banker described as "the return of frightened currency now that people are regaining their courage and confidence."

GAIN CONTRA-SEASONAL

A leading authority who has his finger on the pulse of financial movements not only of this country, but of Europe, attributed the improvement to the return flow of gold from Europe to America and to the return of hoarded currency to the banks. He added that the improvement, instead of being in any way influenced by seasonal forces, was contrary to them. In the third quarters of both 1930 and 1931 the trend had been sharply toward contraction, not expansion as at present.

Aggregate deposits of the city's six largest banks were $5,053,322,000 on September 30, against $4,727,647,000 on June 30, a gain of $325,675,000, or 6.9 per cent.

SURPLUSES INCREASED

Their aggregate holdings of cash and United States government securities were $2,725,588,000, against $2,303,093,000, an increase of $422,695,000, or 18.4 per cent.

Aggregate surplus and undivided profits of the same institutions stood at $555,998,000, against $553,238,000, a gain of $2,760,000, which, while amounting only to one-half of 1 per cent, was hailed as an encouraging indication because it showed that the banks had been able, after paying their regular quarterly dividends, to save at least a modest portion from their earnings for the quarter.

CORN PRODUCTS PROFIT NEAR 1931 LEVEL

Domestic production by Corn Products Refining Company in the three months ended September 30 was equal to that of the corresponding period of 1931, if the export business is disregarded, including production here last year for export, this year

ROONEY ELEVEN TO FACE TEST TOMORROW

The clash tomorrow at Greenlee Field between the Rooneys, defending champions in the West Penn Independent Football Conference, and the crack McKeesport Olympics, heads the day's sandlot gridiron card and is attracting the attention of district fans to such an extent that a record crowd is anticipated.

With one of the strongest teams organized in the Tube City in many years, Coach Bill Sullivan feels that the Olympics will be on the long end of the score tomorrow against the Rooneys for the first time since the inception of the Conference.

Upon two occasions, the kicking ability of Jim Rooney was responsible for the defeat of the Olympics. It must be admitted that Rooney certainly is quite a threat in any game.

This season, Coach Sullivan has primed Halpate and Newlin to do the punting for the club. Newlin, especially, has been getting plenty of distance with his efforts.

Rooney followers are keenly interested to see just how Bucky Wagner and Jimmy Clark will go against the powerful Olympic line. In the first two games, Clark has been brilliant in his broken field running, but has yet to cross the goal line.

While the Rooneys and Olympics are battling here, the East Liberty Papales, defeated and tied in two Conference starts to date, invade Bellaire for a meeting with the strong Eagle eleven, led by Hart Morris, former Pitt guard star, and composed entirely of former district college gridders.

Oakland Community will have a battle on its hands tomorrow at the Frazier street grounds, when it clashes with the J. Scott Morgan team, of Homewood.

W.-J. BEATEN BY DETROIT

DETROIT, Oct. 8.—A touchdown in the third period, which came after the Titans secured the ball on a Wash-Jeff fumble on the 31-yard line, enabled the Detroit University varsity to defeat Wash-Jeff here last night, 7 to 0. The victory gave Coach Gus Dorias, Titan mentor, an even break with the Presidents in the two games played between Detroit and Wash-Jeff since Dorias became coach.

The schools last clashed in 1925 when the Presidents were victors, 6-0, over the first team Dorias coached here. In the six times these schools have met, honors have gone eastward four times.

For two quarters the elevens battled on practically an even basis, each resorting to punting with frequency. Each had scoring opportunities that were tossed away through fumbling.

The Presidents had much the best of the argument in point of yardage gained, they making 164 from scrimmage against 127 by Detroit.

The Titans opened the third quarter with a rush that saw them take full advantage of a fumble by Zagray on his 31-yard line but three plays were necessary for Detroit to carry the ball over the goal for the only touchdown of the game. McCracken kicking the final 11 yards to turn the trick. The lineup:

D.-E. DEFEATS NEW RIVER

ELKINS, W. Va., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—The point after touchdown gave Davis and Elkins' Scarlet Hurricane the margin of victory over New River, 7 to 6, yesterday in the feature of the annual State Mountain Festival.

New River drew first blood early in the third period. Taking the ball on their own 40-yard line, a pass from Rado to Hinchman netted 28 yards. Everhart and Carney hit the line for 12, and Hinchman carried it over from the 10-yard line for the first counter. A bad pass from center spoiled the try for the extra point.

After an exchange of punts, a Davis-Elkins pass, Vest to Tinney, placed the ball on New River's 20-yard line. Tinney added 11 more on an end run, and Corzine crashed the line to put the ball on the 7-yard marker to end the period.

Tinney took a double pass over to tie the score and then booted the extra point. The lineup:

W. VA. BEATEN BY TEMPLE

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 8.—(AP.)—An unexpectedly strong West Virginia University football team, with three of its veterans on the sidelines with injuries, held the Temple University eleVens' attack in check last night, but lost, 14 to 13 through a missed extra point after touchdown.

The failure of Eck Allan, left half, to kick the point after William Karr's 32-yard run for a touchdown in the second period proved fatal to the Mountaineers.

Wilson, West Virginia substitute end, scored the second Mountaineer touchdown in the final period. Temple's scores were made by Whittock and Johnson. Johnson booted two perfect placement goals for the extra points. The lineup:

VALENTINE

Captivating Story of a Shy Girl Rushed Into Love

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Millie Prefers to Economize On Apartment and Spend More for Clothing

CHAPTER XLII.

Val took off her hat, looked around the sunny, cheerful room with an odd tightening of the throat.

It was so like the rooms Millie used to have, years ago. Shabby furniture, shabbier even than the furniture that was in the apartment in Minneapolis. But there was a something about it, an air of comfort, charm. Millie's gold-backed brushes on the dresser. Millie's magazines in careless yet orderly array on a low table that held a bowl of daffodils and white iris, an open box of chocolates, and a crimson leather cigaret case. Millie's perfume in the air. Millie's photographs on the walls.

Photographs of everything that had been life to Millie—and everything, old and new, framed with wide white mats and narrow black frames.

One, slightly faded, of Jim Atkinson in his blue reefer and cap, against a background of lifeboats and smoke stacks. One, even more faded, of Val and Millie, heads together, Val with her straight black hair in what Millie used to call a "dutch cut," Millie, unbelievably radiant and young, a tulle scarf veiling her lovely shoulders.

And then there was a camera study of Millie reclining in a long cane chair in a Chinese garden. And there were stage pictures. Millie in very grand costumes, holding roses in her arms. Several dated back to Santa Barbara days. Millie on the yacht. Millie and Vincent Shallor with Lovely Lady, the horse that won the silver trophy at the Ambassador show.

And there were several very modern, very French camera studies of Millie in straight, slim dresses, with shade hats on her knee—taken when she and Mr. Harris were in Paris of course.

BURNED PICTURES

"My photographic past," Millie said, seeing Val's interest, and then she laughed and added, "But you should have seen the ones I burnt! All the ones with the hot autographs, and the funny, old-fashioned clothes. I had some of you and me that were a scream. There was one, with me wearing a Merry Widow hat, decked with red roses, and I had high-laced white kid shoes. You should have seen it!"

"Oh, I'd like to. Why didn't you save it for me, Millie?"

"What? Oh, the picture? Why, it was ugly. So I got rid of it. Look, Val, isn't this a funny place to live? Do you think you can stand it? Take your things off and hang them up in the dressing room. Right there—back of the wall bed! No, you go in through the bathroom!"

Val hung her clothes on hangers that she picked up from the floor. Millie's wardrobe trunk, partly open, was in one corner, and Millie's dresses, dozens and dozens of them, were crowded tight into the small space. From a chest of drawers, all open, odds and ends of Millie's finery hung out. A silk chemise, a scarlet scarf, a pair of long white kid gloves, a large torn chiffon handkerchief that had evidently done duty as a dust rag.

Val came out, still smiling. "I can't get over it. It's so much like the old days, Millie."

Millie looked around, smiling a little ruefully "Beast of a place, really. But I don't do much more than sleep here. We'll be out all the time. We'll probably get taken out to dinner most every night, but if we miss I can cook. I still like to cook. You can wash the dishes."

MAKES DINNER DATE

The wall telephone in the little square hall jingled. Millie sprang out of her chair.

"No . . . Yes, she's just come . . . well, you can take us to dinner if you like. Bring another man for Val. Val, what kind of men do you like? She says, any kind! You darling! Yes, I know you do . . . Goodbye, dear. Don't be late!"

Smiling, Millie trailed back to the living room.

"That was Bob Forrester, the handsomest man in Southern California. You'll like him. He's bringing someone for you, too. You don't mind going out to dinner?"

Synopsis

Valentine Macfarlane is practically deserted at the age of 8 by her gay, widowed mother, Millie. She is brought up by a manhating maiden aunt, Julia, and becomes a stenographer. After a brief infatuation for the dashing Lester Sherwood, she marries a neighbor boy, Joe Carey, and goes to Minneapolis, where Joe is an architect. Pearl Neely, one of Joe's friends, visits and begins to take liberties about the apartment. Val dislikes Pearl, but says nothing. Unused to housework, Val becomes discontented. Joe tells Val his plans for the future, but she is unimpressed. Millie's husband dies. Val travels alone to California, where she plans to see Lester. She visits Millie.

Now Go On

"Oh, no, I'd love it. Heavens, I came for a good time!"

"You'll have it," Millie predicted. "Of course it won't be the KIND of good time I gave you in Santa Barbara. I haven't the money right now. Look, I even do my own nails!"

While she buffed and filed her nails, and painted them vivid rose, she talked:

"Of course I'd hate it if I thought I'd be poor all my life. But I won't be. That's it. Deemie left almost everything to me, which is only right because his daughters—I give you my word the MEANEST creatures that ever lived—are all married well and they don't need it, and I do. But you know how families are. In-laws!"

WILL PROTESTED

"Yes, Joe's family—"

But Millie went right on.

"The girls were just counting the days until the poor darling would die and they could cash in on what they fondly thought was his IMMENSE fortune. It wasn't so immense either, when we came to find out. Anyway, they were WILD when he married me, though goodness knows they should have been glad, and they would have been if they had cared anything for him, for I did give him a little happiness he'd never have had. And while I'm not one to complain, let me tell you that traveling around looking at ART exhibits and watching an old man fall asleep every night after dinner, is NOT exactly thrilling. I certainly earned all I'll ever get.

"And THEY never did a thing for him. Let me tell you that he was a lonely old creature when I got him. And he was quite in his right mind when he made that will, and I'm going to prove it. Imagine! They're dragging it all into court, making the claim that he was senile—feeble-minded, you know—just to do me out of everything."

What court?" Val asked. "Here?"

Gracious no. New York. That was his residence. New York. Though he wasn't there or anywhere else very long at a time. But it may be years—well, a year or two—before it comes up, and so I thought I'd come out here in the meantime. I'm allowed so little that I couldn't live decently and have any fun at all if I stayed there. So I decided to come out here, where things are cheaper, and I made up my mind I'd economize on an apartment, and have my money for clothes and things. Don't you think that's sensible.

Val's eyes were wide—they were only BOYS!

Val?"

"Very," Val said. "But I don't think I can stay with you very long, because I want to go and see Aunt Julia, and my friend Marjorie Vogel in Hollywood, and of course Joe's all alone—"

"How IS Joe?"

"Oh, he's all right.

"Yes, and he'll stay all right while you're gone. Which is more than you can say of most of them. That's the real reason I came out here. I met Bob Forrester on the boat coming home, and well—it was practically love at first sight. Of course he's a little younger than I am, but that doesn't matter. Val, nobody thinks about things like that any more, do they?"

"I don't know. I guess not. Joe's three years older than I am."

"Yes. You were lucky. All mine were either too old, or too young—or they had wives. Bob hasn't, though. He's never been married. Imagine that! But the women just follow him around. When I found he was going to come to Hollywood, why I made up my mind right then and there. You can't blame a man you know, when he's so handsome. Bob adores me, though. Wouldn't look at another woman. Still, I like to keep an eye on him. Wait till you see him—most fascinating man!"

It wasn't long to wait. Someone rattled the door knob. Millie, instantly alive and radiant, flung a gorgeous mauve and rose batiked silk kimona around her, flung open the door.

A handsome young man with curly fair hair and dancing blue eyes kissed Millie's outstretched hand, then her red, laughing lips.

He said. "May I present my friend, Alex Napopivich?" And in a stage whisper, "Belongs to the royal Russian family!"

Millie, flushed and laughing, turned to introduce Val.

Val's eyes were wide. There was a puzzled frown between her brows. Why, they were only BOYS!

Heart of a Wife

Dicky Relieves Madge's Mind by Appproving Plans

"Edie's bringing a man along?" Lillian asked as I turned away from the telephone.

"Yes, her fourth cousin, Dr. Jim Paige," I answered.

"Now that you've got this fool party started, will you tell me where you're going to put 'em? Oh, I don't mean for the dinner and dance. Your plans will work out all right there. But do you realize that most of your guests are to be here for overnight?"

"I know," I said. "I certainly should be in a sad predicament if it were not for Hugh. He came over yesterday and offered The Larches for all the men of the family and leave the farmhouse just for the women, except for father. He, of course, with his own little suite, will neither disturb anybody nor be disturbed. Wasn't it considerate of him?"

I did not see Lillian's elbow, but that it had prodded her husband's side successfully, I knew when his big voice rumbled:

"Mighty thoughtful, I say; don't you, Dicky-bird? Think of trying to get a shower or shave Friday afternoon, with the house full of wimmen in all stages of dress and undress!"

"Oh, sure!" Dicky piped in an exaggerated falsetto. "Old Hughie is just the dearest thing! And I shall be so pleased to enjoy his hospitality. But it really is very decent of him," he finished in an ordinary tone, and I drew a deep breath, with a sense of danger skirted. But I was careful to have both Lillian and Harry with me later in the day when I told Dicky of Philip Veritzen's plan to provide a little revue during the dinner.

PREPARATIONS MADE

"For the love of Abimliech!" he exploded. "Who's supposed to be giving this party, anyway, you or the neighbors?"

But there was no rancor in his voice, and I knew Lillian was striking the right note when she struck in with the gibe she already had made to me.

"I told Madge if she only numbered a caterer and an orchestra leader among her social acquaintances, she'd be all set for the party."

"Sure you have looked everywhere?" Dicky asked me. But he made no further objections, and threw himself into the preparations for our dinner dance with zest, and with such efficiency of design and execution that when 4 o'clock of Friday afternoon came the house was in complete readiness.

"It's so lovely, Dicky!" I said, as he, Harry, Lillian and I stood at the veranda entrance to the living room looking down the transformed vista of the big room and the dining room thrown together.

The scene justified my encomium. Dicky and Harry, who is an electrical wizard, had been busy ever since his return with experiments in lighting that they were now showing us for the first time.

LOOKS LIKE WOODLAND

With the help of a neighborhood florist and the labor of all our young masculine guests, the room gave a very credible imitation of a woodland, except for the polished floor in the space reserved in the middle of the room for dancing. The small tables looked as if set in a grove, with trees and shrubs set in cunningly concealed receptacles, and a life-like-looking grass cloth spread beneath them.

Through these trees were strung softly-colored lights while from the ceiling at the four corners of the dancing space were suspended four spotlights, their framework covered with laurel. Revolving before these lamps were cleverly constructed glass fans divided into six delicate pastel shades—marvelous tintings of rose, violet, canary, yellow, apple green, powder blue and ivory.

Our men had drawn all the window curtains, so that the room was in darkness until Harry turned a switch that lit the lamps among the trees; and then a second later he switched on the current that started the delicately colored fans to revolving—slowly—with exquisite effect.

"There!" both men said simultaneously, and their voices were curiously boyish in the pleasure of the surprise they were giving us, curiously wistful in their unconscious desire for commendation—"What do you girls think of that?"

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Election day at the Enright! That means that today there was excitement and action at the regular meeting of the Enright Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club when the members voted and elected a complete new set of officers to reign for the next four meetings.

In addition to the election of officers the boys who are members of this chapter participated in a game originated by Manager Bill Zeilor called "Poison." The winner of this enjoyed as a reward for his efforts a large lemon cream pie.

Ruthie Miller again held sway on the large Enright stage and the pupils of her dancing school received another of those strenuous workouts which they have come to know so well.

As the final activity of the day a potato race was held in which the boys competed against the girls, and the winner was awarded a pass good for two at the Enright.

SHOW AT ARSENAL

Members of the Arsenal Chapter have proven such a success entertaining at these Saturday morning meetings that they are in great demand to appear at many of the local functions held in this section of Pittsburgh.

Betty Richards, Josephine Lang, Bernadine Cressler, John Hilliard, Adeline Cicianco, Eleanor Johnston, Lenore Crowley, Al Gressler and Francis Cicianco entertained the patients of the Marine Hospital Thursday night with a one-act comedy that they had put on at the Arsenal some weeks ago. It was called the "Kiddie Kabaret," and the patients applauded these youngsters long and loud.

At the Arsenal today the youngsters offered a one-act comedy called, "Fooling Uncle." When they assembled this comedy they wanted Eddie Johns, the manager, to play the part of the uncle, but Eddie, knowing these youngsters, appointed his assistant, Russell Niggl, to play the part.

Those taking part besides Mr. Niggl were: Bernadine Gressler, Al Gressler, Josephine Land, Thomas Hart, Betty Richards.

It's one of those complicated things that bring many a laugh before the final curtain drops. It was taken from that old-time stage success "Let George Do It."

Dave Jerreries, that popular master of ceremonies again in charge of the meeting at the Schenley, and he joined with the Schenley orchestra in not only singing some of the numbers but took over the baton and led the orchestra in all of its selections.

In addition to the Schenley Orchestra the members were entertained by an elaborate stage show presented by Vera Leibau.

WHY PITTSBURGH IS GREAT

A Doubtful State

Pennsylvania Will Fare Better If Its Course Cannot Be Foreseen—Comment on Local News.

Pennsylvania this year is regarded by the politicians as a doubtful state. That is shown by the news that David A. Lawrence, Democratic county chairman, brings with him on his return from New York. He reports that James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, told him he would advise Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt to make a speech in Pittsburgh.

Farley would not have Roosevelt waste his valuable time on a speech in Pittsburgh unless he thought there was a fairly good chance of the Democrats carrying Pennsylvania this year. He has substantial reason for such a belief in the results of the presidential poll which the Sun-Telegraph is conducting in co-operation with the other Hearst papers.

Roosevelt has had a commanding lead over Hoover in Pennsylvania from the outset. The election is only a month distant, and, with about 30,000 ballots in, the Democratic standard-bearer is still well ahead. Those who know how accurately the Sun-Telegraph's previous straw votes forecast the outcome of elections will agree with Farley that it is worth Roosevelt's while to make a bid for the state.

Signs are not lacking that the Republican High Command is concerned over Pennsylvania. While it is true that, aside from Vice President Charles Curtis' speech in the eastern part of the state a few weeks ago, the Republicans have not been conspicuously energetic, certain boons that have come to Pennsylvania from Washington recently are significant as indicating a possible effort of the administration to curry favor with the local voters.

*The action of the Interstate Commerce Commis*sion in reversing itself on a coal rate decision which, as originally handed down, was unfavorable to Pittsburgh, has been pointed to as an example of the better treatment we are receiving because of the administration's desire to win the good will of Pennsylvania voters.

*It seems scarcely credible that the Interstate Com*merce Commission would be influenced by a political consideration in making a rate decision. But the decision to give Pittsburgh one of the new Federal Home Loan banks may well have been prompted by some such motive. The more generous attitude that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has recently shown towards Pennsylvania may also be a straw which indicates that the state is doubtful this year.

*So long as Pennsylvania was regarded as unalter*ably Republican it received scant consideration from either Republican or Democratic administrations. Witness the placing of the headquarters of the Federal Reserve Bank for this district in Cleveland. Witness the fact that 25 years elapsed after the need for a new Pittsburgh postoffice was officially recognized before the building was started. Witness Washington's indifference to our demand for a canal to Lake Erie.

It would be a fine thing for Pennsylvania if it were to go Democratic next month. The state would receive recognition that it has not had since before the Civil War. Able Pennsylvanians, who have been considered ineligible for the presidential nomination because this was not a doubtful state, would no longer be under such a ban.

The Republican state machine, when in power, would not trample so ruthlessly on the rights of the people, either, if it were certain to be challenged by a strong Democratic party at every election. As a doubtful state Pennsylvania would not have so many of those political and public scandals that result from leaving the same organization in uninterrupted power over a long period of years.

We have an example of such a scandal in the charges against the old Public Service Commission that are now being investigated by a Senate committee. Another example may be seen in the charges that have been brought against former county officials who were connected with the Armstrong regime. It took independent uprisings against the Republican state and county organizations to uncover the evidence of corruption in these cases.

*Successful independent uprisings against the Re*publican state, county and city machines have been so rare that the machines have felt free to administer the public business to serve their own selfish purposes rather than to promote the welfare of the people. If tenure of office were made more uncertain through the existence of a strong Democratic party, there would be stronger inducement to give the people good government.

Pennsylvania would have better government, too, if the citizens would vote in greater numbers. Many Pittsburghers are going to stay away from the polls this year. The registration up to today, the last day for qualifying, was about 41,000 less than during the corresponding period last year. If you have not registered, be sure to do so. The polling places will be open until 10 o'clock tonight.

*One of the members of the Senate committee in*vestigating the public utility corruption charges is reported to feel that it is more important that the bribe givers be exposed than the bribe takers. No aspect of the matter should be neglected. The inquiry should be thorough. If bribes were given to influence decisions in particular rate cases, the cases should be disclosed, in order that the new Public Service Commission may review them.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot is reported as intending to withhold evidence from the investigating committee unless and until it gives proof of a determination to push the probe aggressively and wholeheartedly. The suspicion that he may be holding important evidence of corruption in reserve should help to deter the committee from "whitewashing" the utilities.

Autumn foliage is now at the height of its glory, and for those who enjoy the beauties of nature a trip to the country is well worth while. Those who cannot make such a trip will find some charming rural scenes depicted in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. There are some Pittsburgh scenes, too, that will merit attention.

Arthur Brisbane told in his column yesterday how the French magician Houdin humiliated the African medicine men and witch doctors. There is a most interesting article, profusely illustrated, about these witch doctors and the missionaries' efforts to break up their wicked practices, in the American Weekly to be issued tomorrow as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

'My Brother! But It's Good to See You!'

(Copyright, 1932.)

Observe the noble son of soil,
Old G. O. P., none other.
He hails the farmer at his toil
And loves him like a brother.
He slaps the toiler on the spine
And almost knocks him silly.
"Old pal," he says, "you're looking fine,
And how is dear Aunt Tillie?

"And how," he asks, "Is Cousin Liz,
And how is Uncle Charley,
And how is Grandma's rheumatiz,
And how's the wheat and barley?"
It has an old familiar sound,
His greeting warm and ruddy,
For when election rolls around
He is the farmer's buddy.

Marry-Go-Round

Home, Sweet Home!

Lots of people wail that the old-fashioned home has practically disappeared, and that the modern apartment with individual bedrooms and private baths, personal meal-hours and personal liberty, has none of its charming coherence. It just doesn't MEAN anything!

* * *

Theoretically, I agree with them and sigh for the sweet old days.

* * *

Still, as I sip my morning coffee in a modern hotel apartment, I sometimes feel just a little glad and relieved that "there's no place like home!"

Home! A man's castle! Except that there is no drawbridge, moat or portcullis to defend him against the prying neighbor, the visiting family or the self-invited guest.

* * *

Home! The place where liberties are freely taken, impertinent questions are asked, unsolicited advice flows constantly, and criticism is offered without apology.

* * *

Where the cook sets the dinner hour, the radio sets the retiring hour, and the children set the rising hour.

* * *

Where everybody borrows your handkerchiefs, your pajamas, your toothpaste, your books and your bath-salts—and there is no such word as "Thank-you."

* * *

Where you can have everything you want—provided somebody else doesn't want it at the same moment.

* * *

Where no personal belonging is sacred—not even a man's love-letters or a woman's beauty-cream.

Where no secret thought is possible, no private opinion meets with respect and no faux pas or pet folly escapes criticism.

* * *

Where there is only one heart to the lettuce, and one tenderloin to the steak, and everybody demands a piece of the breast of the chicken.

* * *

Where the Sunday roast becomes stew on Monday, hash on Tuesday and soup on Friday—and you can't kick to the management—or send it back.

* * *

Where you have everything the heart can desire—except the independence and privacy of a hotel, the luxury and privileges of a club—and the peace and quiet of a bachelor apartment!

* * *

Where the joys and sorrows of each are shared by all—also the towels, brushes, soap, talcum, shower-bath and morning newspapers.

EUROPE DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

PARIS, Oct. 8.—I'm saying au revoir to Paris, with the usual relish. Two weeks of it, and elders are tweaked with the stinging consciousness it is for Youth and a fling. I want to get away somewhere—anywhere—to be out of the morass of studied trickery that faces every foreigner.

The most captivating city I know, yet, after 40, it has the disconcerting lure of a beautiful but faithless temptress. One departs in a rage and, in a little while, longs again for her seductive arms. In a sudden dudgeon this afternoon, I slammed on the typewriter lid and shouted to my wife: "I'm packing!"

In three hours we were beyond the city's historic gates, motoring in the general direction of Deauville, with no objective, although there is a tug for Venice. Near Mal Maison, we passed the walled-in, ivy-clad and well-gardened cloister where Pola Negri pined for her lost Valentino.

No bright shades of rhetoric can paint an Indian summer twilight in rural France. But on we flew, past the toyland fields of Normandy, zig-zagging hairpin turns into peaceful villages with those open squares so delightfully hugged by languor. Our driver clips out through the wind: "I drove Mr. Winnie Sheehan."

Entranced by the lure of so fetching a dusk, I burst into a medley of old songs, covering up Harry Silvey's bum barytoning with my clear, dulcet alto, especially masterful in "Shade of the Sheltering Palms." My wife bravely dozed. And Billy, mercifully deaf, napped, too.

* * *

At 9 o'clock we drew up at a remote restaurant, the only customers in a never-to-be-forgotten villeggiatura. It had all the burnished epic of a provincial home, a kitchen gleaming with shining pots and pans, warm and jolly. Our waitress, a shy brunette reminiful somehow of Ona Munson and confusingly aglow with an inward ember to please, pleaded with us to try the dish of the house—La Gougonette d'en face—thumb-sized fish fried whole, explaining "d'en face," indicated they were netted in the silvery stream we faced. I devoured a hatful, and tucked a few in my hair. And we left in reluctance, touched by a hospitality none of us ever felt before. In the moonlight the entire household stood waving us out of sight. Our bill for four was $1.20.

* * *

During the meal, starting with a heavenly washday bean soup, a yellow dog of dubious ancestry, strayed in. Billy's hair jiffied into stiff pompadour. As suddenly they were in a tail-wagging huddle. Dogs feel hospitality, too.

* * *

And a kilometer from the alluring hospice, we, in a flash, plunged into the most impenetrable fog I ever beheld. Even the driver, veiled in a puff of mist, outlined a despairing shrug. We crept snail-like, horn in full blast, hoping for the best but pricked by an awareness the Deauville road zoomed with speeders. Now and then we came to clear patches, passing shuttered tomb-like homes lingering among trees in sleepy whisper. Then into the acridly chocking haze. Once a quick turn of the wheel and a lurch to our knees. Missing a yawning chasm by an eyelash, we waited for the blur to lift to proceed to Rouen. There was no more singing.

* * *

Rouen, at 3 a. m. with a high moon, was in idyllic whiteness. The glint on the famous cathedral, the hushed beauty caused us to tip-toe about ancient cobblestones. A derelict lay open-mouthed on the steps. Down a tiny street, unsteadily, a late wayfarer, the only other human we saw. The big clock, arching the street named for it, boomed a triad as we drifted into the venerable market place where Jeanne d'Arc flamed a torch. Her statue, in flames of golden carvings, leaped in the shadows like goblin fire, standing out lucid and spectral. A subdued trio walked slowly and silently back to the car. And it, with all our luggage, was gone!

* * *

No feeling of helplessness is comparable to being lost in a strange town in a foreign country in dead of night. We drooped on a curb, mute figures of despair. I felt the twin disgust over the idiocy of my hurried departure from Paris. But in a year-long half hour we heard the familiar honk. I hallooed and he found us. He had decided to follow and became lost. I could have kissed the big baboon. I was that glad.

* * *

At 5 a. m. we routed a sleepy concierge in a midget hotel on the outskirts of some forgotten burg. He brewed the chocolate chaude. "Where do we go now?" said my wife who, up to this time, had not been speaking to me for quite a spell. "I don't know about you," I ungallantly yawned, "but I'm going to sleep smack in this cute gilt chair." And in two seconds flat I was living right up to my pronunciamento!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Many years ago I made a strange discovery about life.

It began, as many of the best things do begin, with unhappiness. It was plain life wasn't going to be at all the sort of an affair I had wanted it to be.

What had I wanted it to be? Oh, just what any dreaming youngster wants life to be. Carefree and colorful, thrilling and proud. And, instead, there was a bitterness and a pain in it, a dullness and a despair, beyond any one's power to lift. No matter what I did, no matter how hard a fight I put up, these conditions were bound to persist.

And, of course, I was rebellious. Terribly. I wanted adventure. I wanted power. I wanted happiness, though even then I could perceive that happiness wasn't absolutely essential to great life. And why should these things be denied me, through no fault of my own?

I looked with envious eyes on the lives of luckier people. Women who had beautiful homes, devoted husbands, healthy children—how I envied them! All those fortunate human beings who could go on the great excursions, discover the beauty and magic of life, develop their souls—why couldn't I have their luck?

I didn't have their luck. I was trapped. That very love which was the greatest thing in my life bound me to hopeless pain and poverty. I couldn't get away. I could never live the life I had wanted to live. I could never be the person I had wanted to be. I was trapped. I was cheated.

Through bitter days, through bitter years, I said that over and over to myself. But in spite of my bitterness and my rebellion, I couldn't really believe it. Something deep in my soul, something deep in life denied it. Something told me that life is what we make it.

And so, slowly and painfully, with endless blundering, I came to my great discovery.

I CAME TO SEE THAT THE SET-UP OF LIFE DOESN'T GREATLY MATTER. NO MATTER HOW OUR FATES ARE CAST, THERE ARE ALWAYS THE MAKINGS OF POWER AND WISDOM AND BEAUTY IN EVERY LIFE.

Life is always crude stuff. Whether that stuff be splendid, as in the lives of the rich and the careless, or whether that stuff be shoddy, as in the lives of the poor and burdened, does not greatly matter. A man must make his own life, build his own power, out of the stuff that is given him.

And a great life can be built out of pain and poverty, death and disaster, as surely as it can be built out of ease and bliss. Perhaps more surely, for misery is a more cruel trap than comfort, and a man will struggle harder to get away.

NO MATTER WHAT SORT OF A DEAL FATE HAS HANDED YOU, THERE ARE ALWAYS THE MAKINGS.

There are always the makings of love in the shabbiest street, in the saddest heart, as well as on the most glamorous avenues.

There are always the makings of power. For a man may learn about men and learn how to control them, regardless of his position or environment.

There are always the makings of wisdom. Truth walks as surely through the tenement as through the palace.

There are always the makings of faith. For God is as near to the gutter as he is to the gilded domes.

There are always the makings. If you want life, you CAN find it, wherever you are, whatever you are. If you want life, you MUST find it. Life never comes ready-made to any man, whatever his circumstance.

Victor

Who is victor? Can we tell
If a man does ill or well
By the outward circumstance
In this life of change and chance?
Who is victor; he who goes
Proud in conquest over foes,
Ruthless, no desires denied,
Thrusting lesser lives aside?

Who is victor? He who gains
Peace the worldly heart disdains.
He who turns away from strife
To a fuller, fairer life.
He who conquers self and gives
Truth to every soul that lives.
He is victor. Only he
Treads the hills of victory!

Mr. Mills' Laboring Oar

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The supporters of Mr. Roosevelt could scarcely ask anything better than that all the people should read the speeches of Ogden Mills along with those of the nominee. The labored efforts of the head of the Treasury, with their sins of omission and commission, hardly do justice to his reputation for cunning.

Complaining that the issues are not being debated, he glosses over, or utterly ignores, those that are most vital in the communities where he talks. Thus in his speech at St. Louis, which is vitally interested in the immediate repeal of the Volstead act, which would put vast numbers of the city's idle men to work and give a general impetus to the retail business, Mills, who complains of the lack of debate, did not mention prohibition.

No one should be in better position to discuss the plank written into the Republican platform on the dictation of Mr. Mills, which Dr. Butler calls dishonest, with an echo from Senator Borah. We personally recall Mr. Mills' supreme exertions there, gallantly marching at the head of the column of 300 of Hoover's job holders in the convention; and his success in forcing on the convention a plank which does not mention the Volstead act, carefully refrains from taking a position on the Eighteenth Amendment and proposes in the event of a change the federal government shall exercise more authority over states than now, under the present law.

It is a pity that Mr. Mills did not remember the significance of St. Louis, and, satisfying his ardor for "debate," attack the position taken by Mr. Roosevelt.

* * *

What Roosevelt Promises

The purport of the Mills speeches is that Mr. Roosevelt, in advocating policies of government, does not submit a legislative bill worked out in detail; knowing, as he does, the absurdity of that. It is the same criticism that was leveled at Woodrow Wilson in 1912. Mr. Mills merely parrots his fellow partisans of 20 years ago. In that campaign Wilson set forth clearly enough his views on banking and currency, and foreshadowed some such action as came later in the creation of the Federal Reserve System.

Everyone who heard Wilson then knew, in the event of his election, there would be some such legislation based on fundamental principles that Wilson discussed—but he had no actual bill to offer. So it is with Roosevelt today—the people want to know the spirit and the principles of the man; if these satisfy, they will expect him to incorporate them into laws. That is what he promises, as Wilson promised; and that is what he will do, as Wilson did.

* * *

As the Devil Hates Holy Water

It is not difficult to know the spirit of the Mills speeches. They smell of financial oligarchs and breathe an unmistakable spirit of contemptuous indifference to the average man. But when he, of all men, undertakes with characteristic arrogance to explain Jefferson and Jackson to us, it is too much.

In Jefferson's day he would have joined in the defense of the crooked swindling of the soldiers on their script along with the other Federalists, and in Jackson's day would have peddled petitions for Nick Biddle and the bank. There were issues then that no longer exist and things now made necessary by economic changes of which neither Jefferson nor Jackson could have dreamed. But underlying the whole of Jefferson's philosophy and Jackson's action was one elemental thought—that governments exist for the equal benefit of all the people, and for the protection of the public against the exploitation of powerful monopolies.

Both would have been shocked at Ogden Mills' plan, incorporated in his prohibition plank, for the Federal Government to pass upon the local laws of States relating to the management of local affairs.

When we feel in need of learning something about Jefferson we will not go to a man like Mills, who hates both Jefferson and Jackson as the devil hates holy water.

* * *

The People Want a Change

The thing evidently that worries Mr. Mills (and we are sure he cannot understand it) is that the people want a change. "Why change?" he asked the people of Maine, and within four days they flung their answer in his face in the form of a Democratic victory. And at St. Louis he imitates the unsophistication of a child with this: "How many men just from restlessness have altered their course of life only to live to regret it?"

The 11,000,000 jobless men, their thirty or forty million dependents are getting more restless all the time and they propose to alter their course of life if they can.

As Al Smith answers:

"The great masses of the people have come to the conclusion that the present administration is in a large measure responsible for the crisis, or that, even if it were not wholly responsible, conditions cannot be any worse, and that a change in government may make them better."

Mr. Mills says they cannot be worse; and, of course, they can. They have been getting worse every month for more than three years; and the feeling is growing that they never will get better until we rid ourselves of a regime whose policies have done so much to wreck us, and whose timidity and ineptitude have done so little to help us.

* * *

The Trickery in The Mills Speeches

Mills complains that Mr. Roosevelt has implied some dissatisfaction with the operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Mr. Mills "ain't seen nothing" if he has not read what Al Smith says about the organization of the same corporation. O heard what some of his own people have been saying in Wall street about a certain $80,000,00 loan made to a political favorit of the administration.

The trickery in the Mill speeches lies in his giving to Hoover the credit for measures he did not originate; for measures he opposed, and finally accepted under the compulsion of public opinion. This and his failure to tell the whole story. The whole story is a sad one of tragic indecision and procrastination for which the people paid the penalty.

Thus it was a tragic blunder to underestimate the nature of the crash and to drift along for two years doing nothing but holding conferences for the sake of the moving pictures.

The R. F. C. has saved banks from collapse since it was organized, but tens of thousands of banks had failed before that might have been saved but for the freight train arrival of the idea at the White House.

The President's acceptance of the Wagner employment stabilization bill is good; but the killing of this good measure by the administration for two years after the need was evident to everyone else was a tragic blunder.

Mr. Mills in St. Louis is much elated at what Hoover says a month before the election on foreclosures of mortgages on farms; but where was Mr. Hoover last year when 800,000 farmers lost their farms?

A few months ago Mr. Hoover "reluctantly" signed a Wagner bill for public works to put men in jobs; but he waited and fought every measure of relief until 11,000,000 men were on the street.

And after the bill was passed, with only the scratch of a pen needed to put men to work, Mr. Mills did nothing for 10 weeks until Wagner literally lashed him into action.

The average man has nothing to expect from men with Hoover's record and Mills' principles.
